HOMES OF RIVER PIRATES. Caves in the Mountain Sides Are Watched with Awe by Longshoren

Along the west shore of the Hudson voters of school district No. 12 of Wasco river, between West Point and Esopus county, state of Oregon, that the annual according to the New York World, school meeting for the said district will there are several sidehill openings that are supposed to lead into big recesses Court street, to begin at the hour of 2 not yet explored. Daring men have o'clock on the afternoon of the first rior, but have been frightened into a re-

At Marlborough, Highland and in the famous Storm King mountain, at Cornby longshoremen, who have reason to believe that valuable property is con-

A Cornwall fisherman says he believes that one of these caves, near the foot of Storm King, is the rendezvous of a gang of New York thieves, who receive and dispose of their ill-gotten stock on a strict mercantile basis. He remembers that about the 1st of April he and his father saw a small boat, in which were four men, put ashore at this point. It was an inky black night, and it was not safe for small craft in the wind-tossed water of Cornwall bay.

The fisherman watched the landing and saw the company, who were distinguished by the lanterns they carried, work their way up the mountain side. About twenty minutes after the landing the lights were lost sight of at a point about one hundred feet from the water's edge.

The supposition is that these men entered one of those mercantile caves to make ready for the year's business. No one has ventured near the place, although several hunters say that there is an opening at the spot designated by the Cornwall man. It is believed that this cave is the main resort of river pirates and robbers, who plunder in the Hudson river valley, and if so there is considerable danger attending a visitation to the locality.

This site is particularly lonely and deserted. It can be located by passengers on the day boats as they are pass-It is about three hundred feet ing. west of the place where an attempt has been made to quarry stone for crushing, and to reach it one must run the risk of being bitten by the most poisonous snakes.

OUTRACING A THOROUGHBRED. Man Astride a Pneumatie-Tired The Wheel Triumphs Over a Horse.

The thoroughbred race horse is believed to be the swiftest nuimal on the Minute Cough Cure. It is an infallible globe. So when the king of racers, Salvator, covered a mile on a straight track at Monmouth park on August 28, 1890, in 1:353 - which is still the record -he probably went the distance in less than it was ever traversed before or since by a living creature of any kind moving unaided over the surface of the earth. Had anyone at that time predicted that within five years a man on a bicycle would propel himself over the same distance on a similar or any other track in faster time than that of the thoroughbred, he would, says Harper's Weekly, have been considered something more than merely visionary. At that time the bicyclist was competing with the trotting horse, but that he would ever equal the runner was not dreamed of even by ultra enthusiasts. And yet this undreamed-of feat has now been accomplished. Since the advent of the pneumatie-tire wheel with ball bearings, records have been falling before the bleycle more rapidly than before the trotter-notwithstanding the phenomenal advances of the latter-until of late several wheelmen have been going miles below two minutes, leaving the trotter quite out of the race. But no bicyclist has come within striking distance of the speed of even an ordinary thoroughbred, until of a sudden a professional racing cyclist, John S. Johnson, the "western wonder," took fourteen seconds off the bicycle record at a single clip, and eclipsed not only some but all thoroughbreds by riding a mile in 1:35 2-5. The feat was accomplished over a straight course at Buffalo, N. Y., October 24. The pacemakers were four men mounted on a quadruplet machine. Thus for the first time in the world's history à man has propelled himself a mile purely by muscular exertion faster than the muscles of any other living creature ever carr ried it over the earth's surface. As a triumph of human development, aided by the inventions of human ingenuity, over mere animal development, this achievement is therefore unique and worthy of record quite apart from its interest to the sportsman. Some say the Scotch people have no appreciation for humor. This is hardly true-at least there are exceptions. Many years ago Lord Harry Brougham and Rev. Dr. Thomas Chalmers, two warm friends, met on the street in Edinburgh and stopped for a chat. One of them dropped his cane and both stooped simultaneously to pick is up. with the result that their heads came together with a resounding whack. "Eh, but that made my head ring." said Dr. Chalmers.

Heraldry.

In all civilized foreign nations e knowledge of heraldry is considered by many an important element in higher refinement and culture; in earlier days, according to Thackeray, it "formed part of the education of most noble ladies and gentlemen." In architecture, literature and the fine arts, heraldry is a powerful adjunct and the correct application of its rules is just as surely required as other detail of such work. Even trifling attention to the rudimentary laws of this great science might have prevented many blunders, unfortunately but too indelibly recorded through the indifference or ignorance of architects, authors and artists. This, alas, is especially the case in America, and the necessity for some law and order has become apparent. That we have had a recognized heraldry almost from the date of the country's settlement cannot be denied; and, though its precepts have long been disobeyed, the time has arrived when people begin to recognize this fact and seek instruction upon the subject .- Eugene Zieber, in Lippincott's.

The unusual number of court functions of one sort and another in England and the exceptional number of "drawing-rooms" at Buckingham palace this year have been the result, it is said, of additional activity in London society. The new order of things at Buckingham palace that permits but two hundred presentations at a draw-ing-room has been the one drawback to the screnity of London's best society. Such an innovation naturally has caused a good deal of disappointment
