NEW WORK FOR WOMEN.

The Odd Occupation of a Young Woman in New York.

She is What Might Appropriately Be Termed an Accident Runner—Profit by Others' Injuries.

The unique occupation followed by a young woman was disclosed the other day in New York when there was an accident on the Broadway cable line. The accident in itself was not especially noteworthy; a car that was rapidly rounding the Fourteenth street loop, known as "Dead Man's Curve," struck a newsboy who was running across the street and knocked him to the pavement, where he lay unconscious, his head bleeding from a gash cut by a rough stone. The car stopped, and the usual crowd of curious and sympathetic onlookers gathered about the boy.

Soon a young woman, with a business-like air and a tailor-made gown, pushed her way through the crowd about the prostrate youngster. She promptly took charge of the boy, directed that he be removed to a nearby drug store, and sent a man to ring in an ambulance call. While this was being done she moved quickly through the crowd, pencil and notebook in hand, secured the names of half a dozen persons who had witnessed the accident, jotted down the numbers of the conductor and gripman, and made a rough little diagram of the spot where the accident had occurred—all before the car moved on in its uptown journey. Then she hurried back to the boy and remained by him until his wound had been dressed, and he had been carried away home.

Probably the most of those who observed the young woman's actions set her down as a woman reporter, but if so they were mistaken. Her name is Harriet Emerson, and she herself describes her occupation in this wise:

"My interest in people who are knocked down by street cars is caused chiefly by business reasons. I assure you," she said, brightly, "I'm what you'd call a 'runner.' I suppose, at least that is what we used to call the boys who did this work before I began it." Then, in answer to her listener's bewildered look, she explained further:

"If you'll take the trouble to count them up in your newspaper some morning, you'll see there are a great many accidents of one kind or another in a big city like New York every day. There are a good many, too, that are never mentioned in the papers. You probably know that if a workman who is injured by a falling scaffolding, or a man has his foot cut off by a trolley car can prove that it was the fault of his employer, or the railway company, as the case may be, the law permits him to collect damages for the injury done. But perhaps you don't know that this branch of the legal business has become so extensive that it occupies the whole attention of several firms. It is a lucrative business, too, for juries are apt to give the injured person the benefit of the doubt.

"This is what gave me my opportunity. I made up my mind that a woman who knew just what was wanted, would have less difficulty in getting the proper evidence than a street boy who knew nothing about it. I've been at this work for a year now, and find that it pays me better than my former office employment as a stenographer. I do other things beside taking notes of accidents, such as serving papers and collecting evidence for my firm, but most of my income is derived from such affairs as you have just seen.

"Of course, I don't see all the accidents that happen, though a good many more than you would think come under my eyes, but I have a good many ways of finding out about them quickly. For instance, at most of the dangerous street crossings there are men who know me, and will send a tip to the office when there's a 'case' on. Similarly, I've made the acquaintance of workmen in the railroad yard and on some of the big buildings. I get a percentage on the fee from each case, and some of them net me as high as $50. I don't have to pick up many of them to make a fairly good living. I dare say you think it's an odd occupation, but I like it, and it's good work, too, for if it wasn't for me many of these poor creatures, who are maimed or injured by the carelessness of others, would never get their rights."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A CLEVER TRICK.

How It Was Played Upon a Philadelphia Policeman.

"Faith, I've heard tell that 'all the world loves a lover,' but it's different wid a married couple," said Policeman Mike O'Flanagan, of the Sixth district, by way of a preface to the story of an experience he had at Twelfth and Filbert streets a few nights ago, says the Philadelphia Record. "Well, sir, I was patrolin' me beat, when a young feller wid a trim little chunk an' a woman howidin' on to his arm kem up to me, an' sez 'er: 'Officer, sez 'e, 'tis the devil's own fix I'm in this minute. We were married the day up in Lancaster, an' we kem to Philadelphia for th' honeymoon. It's my int I had Ligejeh me broide fur safe keepin'. When we got into the big station,' sez 'e, 'fo' an' behold wid, the money was gone! Stolen it was, be a dirty thafe,' sez 'e.

"At that the little woman began to weep an' her tears wor heart-renderin' fur th' see. 'Well,' sez the young feller, containin' his story, 'I tried fur to telegraph to me people in Lancaster, but they'd not send the message without pay. So here we are distracted, not knowin' where to turn fur a night's lodgin' an' this our weddin' night,' sez 'e. 'I had a two-dollar bill in me pocket, an' I let 'im have it. 'Tis no more than a loan,' sez 'e, 'an' 'twill be repaid yeh to-morrow.' He wouldn't be content till he had took down me name an' me number. 'God bless yeh,' sez the little woman, an' wid that they went away. An' I haven't heard of them from that day to this. 'Twas a clever trick, an' no mistake."

ASYLUMS FOR INSANE.

The Sacred Temples of Egypt Were the First Known to History.

The first retreats for the insane mentioned in history were the sacred temples of Egypt, where the highest development of moral treatment was practiced for the restoration of reason. One of the earliest notices of the establishment of an asylum for the insane is in the life of St. Theodosius, who was born in the year 424, and died in 529. He established near Bethlehem a monastery, to which were annexed three infirmaries—one for the sick, one for the aged and feeble and the other for such as had lost their senses—in which all success, spiritual and temporal, were afforded with admirable order, care and affection. In medieval Christian times conventional establishments were used for similar purposes, but with these exceptions there were no organized asylums for the insane until the founding of Bethlehem hospital. This, the oldest lunatic asylum in the world, with the doubtful exception of one at Granada, was originally founded in 1247 as a priory in Heshpogate. Its mother church being St. Mary's of Bethlehem (or Bethleem in Wycliff's spelling). It is spoken of as a hospital for lunatics in 1472, and as such it was granted at the dissolution of the mayor and citizens of London, being incorporated as a royal foundation in 1547.
