LAKE ARMAMENTS.

The appropriation of $500,000 for the construction of a war vessel for the great lakes is no violation of the spirit of the old treaty, however it may stand in relation to the letter. By strict terms of the treaty Britain and the United States are each bound to keep no more than one warship on the waters that divide the dominion from the republic. The Michigan, which now has the name of a warship, has the name only. She is a relic rather than a force. She could not live for five minutes in a battle waged in modern style. The queen's ambassador at Washington is reported as offering no protest against the action of our government in this matter. This may be significant of an intent to abrogate a treaty that was made to meet widely different international conditions from those which now prevail, or it may be just an expression of British friendliness and good will.

It is true that war between the United States and Great Britain has been regarded as all but impossible for many years, and at present there is a nearer approach to cordial friendship than at any time since 1814. Nevertheless, during the discussion of the Venezuela matter, the Behring sea question, and the North Atlantic fisheries question the relations between the two countries were strained. Commerce acts as a peace maker between Britain and the United States. If trouble ever come it is more likely to come by way of Canada than from any other direction, and therefore we should be strong on our northern border. The dominion is a somewhat braggart youngster, apt to be saucy and quarrelsome and to shout, "I'll run home and tell," when called to account for insolence.

Of and by itself Canada never can be a serious factor against the peace of the United States; but fussy children often are causes of quarrel between grown folks. A proper demonstration of national force on the lakes might be a cheap insurance against costly trouble:

The dawn of a brighter day is slowly rising for Cuba. Intervention by this country, in view of all that has lately happened, seems an assured fact, and if not intervention, our threatened trouble with Spain, if it pass into reality, will mean the liberation of Cuba from Spanish bondage. The visits at different times of Senators Proctor and Gallinger, and their statements in the senate of the misery their eyes witnessed, supplied the necessary incentive to arouse the American people and, in the name of honesty, put an end to the unchristian slaughter and treatment to which innocent people in Cuba are subjected. It cannot be but that the end of the Cuban revolution is near at hand, and that, after nearly a century of yearning for liberty, the boon is at last to be granted. "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small." Some measure of justice will have been meted out to Cuba before the present year closes.

The Republican party of Wasco county has a splendid opportunity to be successful in the coming county campaign. Although the forces of fusion are numerically strong, the ticket put up by them is confessedly weak and cannot secure the support even of the fusionists. If the Republicans nominate a clear, straightforward ticket, there can be no question as to the result of the election. The primaries, which are to be held tomorrow, should be made a means to this end. Every Republican voter who has the interests of his party at heart should attend the primary polls and vote for delegates to the county convention who will nominate only such men who deserve recognition. The primary is the place where the battle is fought, and the friends of good government should be on the watch and see that the delegates to the county convention are worthy representatives of the party.
