NO TIME FOR HARD WORDS.

Republican success in Oregon must be secured next June in order to maintain the good name of the state. The coming election will be watched with great interest in all parts of the country, because it is the first to occur, and will be taken by many as a forerunner of what shall follow next November, when general elections are to be held. A weighty duty rests upon the Republicans of Oregon this spring, and not one should be found faltering in his place.

The great drawback to assured success is the factional difficulty in Multnomah county. This we do not believe to have been wisely handled by the state convention, and instead of being made better, has grown worse. It should be the especial charge of the Republican leaders to see that some sort of a reconciliation is effected whereby the feeling of soreness may be allayed and the Republicans made to forget their personal and political grievances.

The campaign this year is one of principle, and so it will be viewed throughout the country. Oregon has committed herself to sound money in the past, and nothing has arisen to justify a reconsideration of the vote of November 1896. The silver issue is being forced again to the front, and the Republican party must defend the standards it won a year and a half ago.

The men who have been honored with leadership must see their duty plain before them, and make every honorable effort to allay this unfortunate factional feeling. It is not a time for abuse or unkind words. Such treatment never did, nor never will, win a vote. But let such a spirit of conciliation be shown that every voter will be made to feel that he is still a Republican, and not an outcast.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE MILITIA.

The following from the Oregonian will be of interest to militiamen, who are under the impression that they are not subject to the call of the president:

"Every man between the ages of 18 and 45, who is not included in the exemptions provided for by law, is a national militiaman, subject to the orders of the chief executive of the nation. National Guardsmen have asserted that they were enlisted for service in their own state alone, and that any service outside of the state must be purely voluntary, but this opinion is clearly an error, for the federal constitution is supreme, and no state can so amend the constitution and laws of the United States so that a man can be a member of the state militia for his own private ends and the ends of the state, but not a member for national purposes.

"The United States supreme court says:

"Our understanding is the organization of the active militia (National Guard) of the state conforms exactly to the definition usually given of militia." Whatever the respective states have made their organized militia to be, that is the militia that the president may call into the service of the United States. When the militia passes into the service of the United States, it comes under the military law, and the president, as commander-in-chief, can determine finally what it shall do and where it shall go. Once in service, militiamen are subject in all respects to the same control as men of the regular army.

 "The constitution of the United States says that congress shall have power to provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states, respectively, the appointment of the officers." During our civil war this provision was interpreted to mean that the authority to appoint and commission officers of the volunteer militia rests with the governor, unless otherwise provided by state laws."
