TREASONABLE JOURNALS.

In the house on Wednesday Representative Belknap declared that a certain New York paper had "spread broadcast to the world the location of every mine in New York harbor." If that is true, the publisher and editor of that paper ought to be arrested and tried for treason, says the Spokesman-Review. The constitution of the United States defies treason as "levying war against the United States, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

The aid which might be given by an American citizen who shouldered a rifle for Spain would be infinitesimal in comparison with the aid it would derive from learning the location of the mines in our harbors.

In times like these it is preposterous for any newspaper wishing to print information damaging to this government to seek shelter behind the provision of the constitution which declares that "congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press." As well might be claimed by some traitorous wretch holding communication with

Spanish agents that interference by our government was an abridgment of his constitutional right of "free speech."

No self-respecting or patriotic journal will want to disseminate news which would aid and comfort the enemies of this country. Journalistic "enterprise" which goes to that length ought to be brought up with a sharp warning; and if the offense be repeated, the proprietor and his editor ought to be clapped in prison, and made to answer to the stern charge of treason.

It used to be Grant's idea that all personal misunderstandings would keep till the war was over; but Grant was an old-fashioned soldier who entertained the silly notion that what the country wanted him to do was to make things hot for the enemy.

One way to get even with Spain would be to charge up against her the expense involved in chasing her fleet around the globe. We should not forget the coal bills when the day of settlement arrives.

The climate of the Philippines is remarkably salubrious at this season of the year. The rainy season has not as yet set in, but days and nights are quite Dewey at present.

Let us then be up and Deweying, with a heart for any fate; still achieving, still pursuing, learn to get there, not to wait.

If the Spaniards were so anxious to avoid a sea fight why didn't they keep their fleet at home?
