FOLLY OF UNPREPAREDNESS.

No one now disputes the importance of the navy in the war with Spain, says the Inter Ocean. It is clear that a war with any foreign power must be mainly a war on the sea. Very few will deny that if congress ten years ago had shown as much interest in the navy as the present congress there, would have been no war with Spain. A navy adequate to the demands made upon us would have prevented war.

Hurried preparation for war is always expensive. We are spending now about a million dollars a day to put our army and navy on a war footing. This is at the rate of $360,000,000 a year. If congress in the last decade had added $10,000,000 a year to our naval expenditures, there would be no heavy expenditure now, because there would be no war. When the Maine was destroyed the necessity for a stronger navy was so urgent that we purchased warships wherever they could be bought. A congress that would have haggled over ordinary naval expenditures in time of peace put $50,000,000 at the order of the president without a murmur of protest or objection. The money was well spent and the navy was considerably strengthened, but it would have been more economical had we years ago, in anticipation of the emergency, built the needed ships ourselves.

The United States has a sea coast of over 6,000 miles in length, or, rather two lines of sea coast so situated that a vessel ordered from one to the other must make a voyage of 10,000 miles. The folly of a nation with such coast lines, and with such commanding position among the great powers of the world, in being unprepared for a crisis is now clear to every one. If our navy was what it ought to be, we would be able to destroy Spain's entire navy as Commodore Dewey destroyed the Spanish fleet on the Pacific. We could protect our Atlantic and Pacific coasts, blockade Cuba and Porto Rico, capture Havana, and at the same time crush Spain's two Atlantic squadrons, even if our warships were compelled to seek the enemy at Cadiz.

To make one strong fleet in Cuban waters we have had to call the Oregon from the Pacific, and to concentrate the two Atlantic squadrons. While manœuvring to capture the Spanish fleet Admiral Sampson must guard our own coast and keep up the blockade of Cuba. If he can capture the Spanish warships Spain will be crippled almost to helplessness. If the Spanish fleet escapes, and the war continues for a year, we will grow stronger, as our vessels now in course of construction are completed. The Princeton will soon be ready, and the cruisers Chicago, Atlanta and Philadelphia will be ready next fall. A little later the great battleships, the Kearsarge and Kentucky, will re-enforce our fleets, and next year the Alabama will come into the field.

The very fact that in this emergency the navy has done so much, and is doing so well, emphasizes the folly of the past. The fact that the navy and the army are rising to the occasion, and will make success sure, must not blind us to the mistakes that made war possible.
