The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work.

How to Look Good.

Good looks are really more than skin deep, depending entirely on a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look; if your kidneys be affected, you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will surely have good looks. "Electric Bitters" is a good Alternative and Tonic. Acts directly on the stomach, liver and kidneys. Purifies the blood, cures pimples, blotches and boils, and gives a good complexion. Every bottle guaranteed. Sold at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store. 50 cents per bottle. 5

I was seriously afflicted with a cough for several years, and last fall had a more severe cough than ever before. I have used many remedies without receiving much relief, and being recommended to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, by a friend, who, knowing me to be a poor widow, gave it to me I tried it, and with the most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved me very much and the second bottle has absolutely cured me. I have not had as good health for twenty years. Respectfully, Mrs. Mary A. Beard, Claremore, Ark. Like a Miser He Hoarded and Gloried Over Them.

One day while watching I saw a crow crossing the Don valley with something white in his beak, writes Ernest Seton Thompson in Scribner's. He flew to the mouth of the Roseleaf brook, then took a short flight to the Beaver elm. There he dropped the white object, and, looking about, gave me a chance to recognize my old friend Silverspot. After a minute he picked up the white thing, a shell—and walked over past the spring, and here, among the docks and the skunk cabbages, he unceremoniously piled shells and other white, shiny things. He spread them out in the sun, turned them over, lifted them one by one, nestled on them as though they were eggs, toyed with them and gloried over them like a miser. This was his hobby, his weakness. He could not have explained why he enjoyed them, any more than a boy can explain why he collects postage stamps, or a girl why she prefers pearls to rubies; but his pleasure in them was very real, and after half an hour he covered them all, including the new one, with earth and leaves, and flew off. I went at once to the spot and examined the hoard; there was about a half in all, chiefly white pebbles, clam shells and some bits of tin, but there was also the handle of a china cup, which must have been the gem of the collection. That was the last time I saw them. Silverspot knew that I had found his treasures, and he removed them at once; where, I never knew.

AREAL NO MAN'S LAND.

Where Only Women Are Ever to Be Seen.

The Strange Tale of a New Zealand Explorer in the Friendly Islands—An Interesting Community.

My attention was first drawn to the subject of modern Amazons by means of a Japanese picture book. I had been exposed for sale in a native shop at Tokio and attracted the attention of a visitor, who brought the curiosity to me simply as a specimen of artistic work. The book consisted of a series of pictures delineating the adventures of the crew of a shipwrecked vessel. The boat containing the survivors arrived on the shores of an island tenanted only by women. The artist had depicted with barbaric fidelity to nature and with grim humor how the attentions of the numerous fair ones became embarrassing to the small party of visitors, until at last the sailors had to fly to their boat and escape to the dangers of the deep rather than endure the overwhelming attentions of the hostesses too fair and kind. The book and its subject would have passed from my memory as a mere pleasant story had I not soon after found what one might call the "letterpress" of the illustrations, circulating as a legend in the Friendly Islands. A circumstance so remarkable as this coincidence of ideas in peoples so far removed both in point of distance and of race as the Tongans and the Japanese could not fail to strike one deeply interested in the anthropology of Oceania.

The Tongan legend was heard by Mariner at the beginning of the century, long before any white colonists resided in the Friendly Islands, and although I have not been able to get the story direct from Fiji or Samoa, I have not the slightest doubt that voyagers, so hardy as Japanese and Polynesians are famous for having been in past centuries, must have had some foundation of fact on which to build so strange a tale. Its confirmation we have in the relation of the celebrated missionary, Dr. James Chalmers, of New Guinea. Here is the modern account of the woman's island:

"At Port Moresby I had heard of a woman's land, a land where only women—perfect Amazons—lived and ruled. These ladies were reported to be excellent tillers of the soil, splendid canoeists in sailing or paddling and quite able to hold their own against attacks of the sterner sex, who sometimes tried to invade their country.

"To find so interesting a community was of great moment. As no part of the coast from the East Cape to Port Moresby would be left unvisited by us, we were certain to come across the Amazonian settlement. We heard that Malibukolo (Toulon) canoes with women were numerous, and some very large ones with women alone. In the early morning we were off the island, and soon ready to land. On crossing the reef we met two canoes, one with men and one with women. We signed to them to go to the vessel, while we pulled up to the large village on the north side.

"As the boat touched the fine, hard sandy beach a man, the only being in sight, ran down and stood in front. I went forward to spring ashore, but he said I must not. Finding he knew the Daunal dialect, I said to him I must land, that I was a friend, and gave him a strip of red cloth and stepped ashore, when he ran away into the bush.

"At our first approach I could only see this one man, but now I saw hundreds of grass petticoats on women standing under the houses. I could not see the upper parts of their bodies, only the petticoats and feet. They were indeed quiet until I advanced nearer, when one wild scream was given that would try stronger nerves than mine and signs to keep away.

"I held up my hands and red cloth, but, strange to say, they seemed to have no effect on that strange crowd. I never saw so many women together. How were we to meet? was the question. To be talked by them would never do. I threw on the beach a piece of red cloth and a few beads, walked away quite carelessly and apparently not noticing what was taking place. A girl steals from out the crowd, stops, crosses her hands, pressing her breast. Poor thing, not courage enough; so, lightning speed back. It is evident the old ladies object to the younger ones attempting, and they are themselves too frightened. Another young damsel, about nine or ten years old, comes out, runs, halts, walks out-like, but the touch of her feet on the sand should waken me from my reverie; another halt, holds her chest, but the spirit should take its flight or the pattering heart jump right out. I fear it was beyond the slight pattering then, and had reached the stentorian thump of serious times. On a cuss! well done! She picks cloth and beads up.

"I have gained my point and will soon have the crowds—no need to wait so long to have the beads picked now, and after a few more temptings it is done. I am besieged by the noisiest crowd I have ever met, and am truly glad to escape on the vessel and brought her round to the west side, where we anchored. Crowds met me on the beach, but no men. I gave my beads indiscriminately, and soon there was a quarrel between the old ladies and the young ones. The latter were ordered off, and because they would not go I must go. The old ladies insisted on my getting into the boat, and, being now assisted by the few men we met in the canoe, I thought it better to comply. Long after we left the beach we heard those old cracked, crabbed voices anathematizing the younger members of that community.

"I am fully convinced that this is the woman's island, and can easily account for its being called so by stray canoes from the westward."—Edward Tregear, Christchurch (N. Z.) Press.
