SPAIN'S PRESENT CONDITION.

Buckle long ago called Spain "a huge, torpid mass," and said she was the only representative then remaining of "the feelings and the knowledge of the Middle Ages." And the worst symptom in her case, as he expressed it, was that she was satisfied with her own condition. "Though she is the most backward country in Europe," he remarked, "she believes herself to be the foremost. She is proud of everything of which she ought to be ashamed." Spain's present condition is about the same as it was when Buckle wrote these words, nearly half a century ago. Theoretically her government system is more advanced than it was then, and her people have technically a voice in the management of their political affairs. But the privilege is of little benefit to them, for only a small proportion of them used it. Its population is as ignorant as ever, its political methods those of the seventeenth century, and its whole system of civilization is at war with the practices and aspirations of the age. In more respects than that of cruelty the Spaniards are, in Canning's phrase, the "Turks of Western Europe."

The urgent necessity for the Americans to capture Porto Rico at the earliest possible moment is seen on all hands. The Pall Mall Gazette of London says, "the seizure of Porto Rico and the Philippines will place America in a position to dictate the only terms she could possibly accept." Carranza, Spain's late naval attache in the United States, in writing to the minister of marine from Montreal, said he was afraid lest the Americans should seize Porto Rico before attacking Havana. We ought to have Porto Rico in our hands before we finish the conquest of Cuba. We can demand it as an indemnity, of course, if Spain gives up before we seize it, but matters would be simplified much if we should have the island in our possession, or even have its principal port, before Spain's collapse comes. It is easier and cheaper for us to seize Porto Rico now than it will be in some future war.

A Madrid paper says Spain is willing to resume former relations with the United States with unchanged territorial conditions. It strikes Uncle Sam that peace of that kind is too much like war to be worth talking about.

Austria realizes that its international influence amounts to little except in Eastern Europe. It has deecided to spend $30,000,000 within the next six years on battleships and cruisers, with three armored monitors for the Danube flotilla. But Austria must put more money than that into ships if it proposes to meddle with the affairs of the United States.

Gen. Blanco continues to waste his attempted negotiations on Gen. Gomez. The latter is perfectly well aware that he will soon be somebody in Cuba and Blanco nobody.

The government is getting all the gold it cares to handle. If any free silver crank in congress voted for war in order to destroy the gold reserve, he missed the mark.

The Carolines consist of over 500 islands. If we have to name all of them in addition to the Philippines our new responsibilities in the Orient will be arduous.
