SEA POWER ILLUSTRATED.

Spain's navy is virtually gone. Two Spanish armored ships remain which are at sea, but are understood not to be in the best condition. The torpedo boats distributed among for resistance to a strong fleet. They are too frail to go into a general engagement except by a quick dash, and all attempts of the kind in the present war have met with disaster.

A phase of the conflict is reached in which we can send a strong squadron to the coast of Spain. Its business there will be to fight the best seize a Spanish harbor for further operations; to capture ships, compel strike at all exposed points on the the Snipes-Kinersly Drug Co. seaboard. Unless Spain can detent or drive off our squadron, the kingdom will be in a condition of semiblockade. Nearly all the foreign trade of Spain is conducted on the sea. The presence of a hostile fleet along its long ocean boundaries will office. cause heavy loss, to say nothing of the general feeling of impotence and

To avoid these grave results Spain may decide to sue for peace before Commodore Watson's fleet can cross the ocean. The colonies would be For sale by Blakeley & Houghton. surrendered without extensive army operations. Sea power would then have decided the whole issue. It is necessary to bear in mind that the army campaign at Santiago was designed to solve a naval problem. The first necessity of the situation was to dispose of Cervera's fleet. place of refuge and sent him to his

That great naval exploit, which will always fill a remarkable page in the world's history, in turn lightened the task of the army. Spain has no ships left to defend or supply her colonies. To relinquish them is her Regulator Line only course. Havana, therefore, as a sequel of the naval battle at Santiago, may fall without a shot, passing out of Spanish hands along with the whole of Cuba, and Porto Rico as well. The key to this result is the complete mastery of the ocean against Spain. The fears of Cadiz, Barcelona, Cartagena and the Canaries may settle the war. Sea power has not been overestimated.

Elements of discontent will exist in Cuba after the Spanish flag comes down and the Spanish troops are withdrawn, but the protectorate of the United States will manage affairs with a firm hand. Every Cuban seaport will be controlled by our navy and by sufficient garrisons. The Spanish volunteers who live on the island and the convicts organized as Spanish guerrillas are not comparatively numerous and will be under a crossfire calculated to bring them into quick subjection.

Nearly all the native Cubans want peace and a chance to build up the industries of the island. When the Spaniards go, the fears of the timid will vanish and business men turn to the future with confidence.

To say that the war was practically settled when the Spanish fleet was crushed may be assuming too much, but the present outlook warrants the opinion.

One of the signs of prosperity is the revival of railroad construction. The estimate is that $60,000,000 will be expended on the new roads in 1898, the largest showing since 1893. Candies, Nuts,

The conviction is growing in Spain that a tremendous mistake was made in courting war with the United States. Even Spanish foolishness can be modified with 13-inch guns.

The courtesies we are now extending to the Spanish prisoners of war ought to go far toward cementing those ties we heard so much of during the World's fair year, but have since been somewhat shattered.

It takes some time for a Spanish general to make up his mind after he discovers that he has a mind to make
