GOVERNMENT OF CUBA.

General Shafter has served notice on the Cubans that ante-war methods are to cease with American occupation. His language was plain enough to comprehend instantly, and the Cuban soldiers are therefore in the sulks. Fortunately for Cuba the government of that island, once the Spanish armies are driven home, will be given over to another class of men, than the humble soldiers in the field. The rulers must be men of education, who have the country's weal at heart. They must be impartial in their dealings with native and Spanish born citizens, honest in trade and capable of understanding the laws they endeavor to enforce. These facts are gathered from the tone of the president's proclamation as to Santiago de Cuba.

It is not astonishing that the Cuban privates are unfit for governing powers. They have been hunted like wild beasts, starved, insulted, despoiled, until the instincts of humanity have been lost in the lust for revenge. In their present temper they are unfit to govern themselves without the stern military laws which have been promulgated by their leaders.

General Shafter will find no lack of material among the traders and planters from which to select native judges. He will find response to the spirit and letter of the president's proclamation when its ideas are thoroughly comprehended. But above all civil laws military law must be supreme for some time if the safety of the people is desired. Delivered from the outset into the hands of their sworn enemies, those Spaniards who are in Cuba would be given a taste of their own laws and punishments. Estates would be confiscated, citizens thrown into prison on the slightest pretext.

Time must heal the sores of the Cubans before they are capable of acting fairly with all the people. When the cane again covers the plantations, when new dwellings spring from the ashes of those destroyed in the war, the Cubans will turn from the rule of the sword and embrace the arts of gentle peace. Until that time the island will be blessed with the guidance of American officers and gentlemen, and justice will be dispensed without fear or favor.

Admiral von Diederich, of the German squadron at Manila, went to the wrong person when he asked a British captain what the English cruiser would do in case Germany interfered in the bombardment. He should have asked Admiral Montojo, late of the Spanish squadron, what Dewey would do.

Governor-General Blanco wishes he were a younger man so that he might put in more years fighting the hated Yankees. He is not so old but that he can have all the time necessary. A number of other Spaniards have felt as he does now, but experience has taught them that their lives were too long, if anything, for all practical purposes.

The 25,000 Spanish soldiers surrendered at Santiago are complaining because they will be compelled to go home without arms. They are in luck to be able to go home with their heads.

The sun, which has refused to set on British territory during the past hundred years or so, will now have to get up early to find the United States flag flapping in the dark.

Among other little miscellanies of the Santiago conquest will be a nice supply of smokeless powder, something we have been much in need of since the opening of hostilities.

Perhaps Camara's fleet might be engaged to transport the captives back to Spain. This seems to be the only opportunity it will ever have of making itself useful.
