er gave chase, but was soon distanced. Occasionally the by would slacken his speed and call out: "Dad, if I come came back will you promise not to lick me?" and the puffing dad would answer "No." Finally the by put on extra steam and disappeared. The Albany Herald says that the latest news from the front is that dad has raised a flag of truce.

J. E. Lathrop, the well-known newspaper man of Pendleton, for some years city editor of the East Oregonian, passed through the city last night en route to his home, having just returned from a year's stay in Alaska. Mr. Lathrop spent most of his time at and in the vicinity of Dawson City, and while he did not come home loaded with nuggets, he located several promising claims. He says Dawson City is overdone, there being hundreds of men there out of employment.

Robert McNelly, a farmer living ten miles southwest of Colfax, was arrested Saturday, with his two sons and two daughters, on a charge of murder, the alleged victim being an infant child of one of the daughters. The story is utterly revolting, involving allegations of unspeakable criminality on the part of the mother of the child and one of her brothers, and of murder or accessory to murder on the part of the other members of the family. All are now in the Colfax jail.

Among the names of the officers appointed from the recruits, we note with pleasure the name of S. F. Fouts, of this city, who has been appointed as first sergeant of Co. I, which is at present at San Francisco waiting to leave for Manila August 3d. Among those afflicted with the measles and other maladies appears the name of another young man from The Dalles, George McKinney. His case is slight and the only one among the Dalles boys at the Presidio who is in poor health.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Filloon had a narrow escape Sunday from what might have been a very serious accident. They were driving down Mill creek, when a careless driver, going in an opposite direction, drove into their rig, throwing Mrs. Filloon out and considerably damaging Mr. Filloon's vehicle, as well as almost demolishing his own. Mrs. Filloon's injuries are not serious; while the other characters were not hurt at all. The accident terminated very fortunately, as there was an abundance of room for very serious damage.

Grant county stockmen have sold more stock this year than for the past seven, and from present indications there are enough buyers in the field to handle every marketable hoof in the county. Not only are the regular foreign buyers taking all they can possibly contract for in the way of sheep and cattle, but local men are buying for speculation. Money seems to be unusually easy, and the general prosperity and rise of wool and live stock since the inauguration of the present administration has instilled old-time energy and confidence into the hearts of Grant county's citizens.

Yesterday morning news was brought to the city from Kingsley of the death of another of Rondeau's little girls, Minnie, aged about 7 years. Less than a week ago Annie, aged 9, died of scarlet fever and diphtheria. Friday the old gentleman, "Grandpa" Rondeau, passed away, and by the death of the little girl the number is increased to three in about a week, which seems to prove that "trouble never comes single." This makes the third child that Mr. and Mrs. Rondeau have lost in the last few years, the first being Nellie, who died about five years ago, and was at the time of her death about 7 years old. All three children were remarkably intelligent and pretty, and the entire community sympathizes with the bereaved parents in their terrible affliction.

The body of George Freeman, who was swept over the falls at Oregon City in a small rowboat February 8th, was found in the Willamette river Saturday morning by the crew of the steamer Pomona. Four men lost their lives at the time of the accident—Freeman, his two sons, Harry and James, and L. J. Shannon. They lived at Canemah, and were rowing across the river in the fog on their way to their work at the paper mills. They lost their bearings and were carried over the falls by the current. About a month afterward the body of James Freeman, the youngest of the four, was found by Andy Magone floating down the river, near Magone's Park. The bodies of two of the drowned, Harry Freeman and Shannon, were never recovered. George Freeman's body was taken in charge by the coroner. When brought to Oregon City it was identified by the deceased's son. Mr. Freeman was 56 years old at the time of his death.

PLEASANT SUNDAY AT CAMP SAMPSON

A PARTY OF DALLES PEOPLE ENJOY AN OUTING AT THIS NEWLY-NAMED RESORT.

A Model Place to Seek for a Cool Atmosphere. Beautiful Scenery, a Few Mosquitoes and a General Good Time.

In company with a pleasant party of friends, and in response to the kind invitation of the hostess of what was inappropriately known as "Old Maid's Rest," the writer took the 7 o'clock train Sunday morning to spend the day in one of the cool retreats of the Cascades.

On our arrival at the Locks we were met by Miss Georgia Sampson, of this city, who, by the way, with her grandmother, Mrs. C. M. Donnell, as co-partner, is proprietor of the "Rest" to which we were invited. A few minutes' walk brought us through the city of Cascade and in view of a small tent, in a beautiful level grove, which we were informed was our destination. The camp's surroundings are delightful, it being cool, shady and picturesque; bounded on one side by the high mountains, on the other by the roaring torrent of the Columbia; while in the immediate vicinity are curiosities enough to keep a person busy for a week viewing them all.

On our arrival a lunch was served, after which the government locks and wreck of the Regulator and other points of interest were visited. As there were kodaks in the party, all kinds of snap shots were taken, and we have no doubt that the collection will be valuable.

The question of a new name for the camp came up during the dinner hour, and after a discussion it was decided to re-christen it "Camp Sampson," not after the admiral, but that estimable young lady who presides over the favorite resort.

The afternoon was spent in fishing but as the attention of the fishermen—and women—was somewhat diverted, we will not speak concerning the number of speckled beauties caught.

A flag raising was billed for the afternoon, but the rain prevented such patriotic performance and the ceremony was postponed indefinitely or until the rain stopped.

As "all is well that ends well" the entire party decided to end the day in that manner and attended church in the evening. All departed themselves admirably, with the exception of two of the boys, who had had success in singing and went out to get the air. They squared themselves, however, by returning in time to meet the congregation at the door as they were leaving.

After bidding the hostess adieu, casting a few longing glances at the camp where we had enjoyed ourselves so well, and receiving pressing invitations to return again, we took the train at 10 o'clock on our return trip, which was uneventful in the extreme, as everyone tried their best to spend the time in dreamland, and owing to the exertions of the day they were tired enough to be delightfully successful.
