PUERTO RICO CAMPAIGN.

Simultaneous with the announcement that General Miles and his army have landed in Puerto Rico comes the first real note of peace, a formal application by Spain through the French ambassador at Washington. This application for a termination of the war, says the Spokesman-Review, will not interfere materially with the campaign in Puerto Rico, if the usual delays incident to peace negotiations obtain in this war. There is almost unlimited quantity of red tape about such negotiations, and it may be months before an armistice is arranged. It is believed the terms of settlement will include propositions over which there will be long disputes.

It seems to be understood by this time that the United States will demand certain conquered territory, in all probability Puerto Rico, and possibly more. This claim will be combatted by Spain to the utmost and she will enlist every agency in Europe to assist in evading the surrender of territory. It is known to Spain, and even better to the rest of Europe, that colonization will be vigorously fought by a strong party in America, and this will assist in delaying the acceptance of overtures. It is, therefore, most probable that unless the unforeseen happens, the signing of a peace proclamation will not be far from the new year.

In the meantime Miles has an aggressive campaign before him, and he goes prepared to maintain it until the American flag displaces the Spanish standard at San Juan. The island is practically free from epidemics, little yellow fever appears there and the mountainous character of the interior makes possible the healthiest conditions for invaders from northern climes. He is within easy reach of a railroad line and can use that for transportation, or if it is torn up in places has an avenue whereby artillery can be moved with little difficulty. The distance across the island is practically nothing. Sixty miles at the outside is the distance the troops under Miles will be obliged to travel to reach San Juan, if they walk every foot of the way, and there will be enough of them to clear the surrounding country of guerillas and small bands of soldiers.

Long before peace is declared General Miles should be in control of the entire island. Should the capital offer serious resistance the fleet can approach near enough to the city to batter it down, leaving to the land forces the siege of the forts, if it is impossible to make them surrender by attack from sea.

It seems as if Miles should have a comparatively easy time in capturing every important point in Puerto Rico, with small loss of men and little waste of ammunition. If there were mistakes in the campaign before Santiago, they will not be repeated before San Juan. The early subjugation of Puerto Rico will permit of no delays, now that peace is in prospect, and no stone will be left unturned to be completely dominant there when the time comes to settle the terms.

H. W. Wilson, the British naval expert, commenting on the naval battle at Santiago, which he describes as "an amazing feat of arms," institutes this comparison between American and British naval officers: "Sampon's success is a great triumph for the scientific officer. The American officer is educated as our officer are not educated. We have hitherto consoled ourselves with the reflection that he is a mere theorist. But mark him at his work, and he is practical enough. Has there been any want of coolness and courage either at Cardenas, or at Manila or at Santiago? I would not disparage the splendid men whom Britannia sends forth year by year. They are as good as they can be with their education. But the question is not what they are, but what the men they may have to meet will be. The scientific officer has proved his value on the battlefield."

Persons troubled with diarrhoea will be interested in the experience of W. M. Bush, clerk of the hotel Dorrance, Providence, R. I. He says: "For several years I have been almost a constant sufferer from diarrhoea, the frequent attacks completely prostrating me and rendering me unfit for my duty at this hotel. About two years ago a traveling salesman kindly gave me a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Much to my surprise and delight its effects were immediate. Whenever I felt symptoms of the disease I would fortify myself against the attack with a few doses of this valuable remedy. The result has been very satisfactory and almost complete relief from the affliction." For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Smoke Cigars.
 Why do we retail more Cigars than others?
 Why do smokers go out of their way and pass cigars of the same grade?
 Not because we have better cigars or better brands, or any greater variety; no, not that.
 Why, because we have the finest cigar case in the state and keep our cigars in better condition.
