SPAIN'S DELUSIVE HOPES.

Spain's hopes to secure a favorable settlement in the peace commission at Paris are destined to disappointment. They will fail for at least two reasons: Her complete collapse in the war deprives her of all right to expect favors, and the aid which she looks for from Russia, France, Germany and Austria will not be furnished. To a certain extent, of course, the peace commission's environment is calculated to arouse false hopes in Spain. Popular sentiment in Paris is on the side of Spain, and the influence of the official class among the nations of continental Europe will be exerted indirectly for that country, but the pressure which it expects will be absent. The settlement will be between the United States and Spain strictly. No outside interference will be permitted by this country. The relative strength of the combatants as determined by the war, and the position and the immediate prospects of each at the beginning of the armistice are the considerations on which the adjustment will be based.

That the Spanish commissioners will make a hard fight to retain the Philippines was to be expected, and the report to this effect which comes from Madrid will not surprise anybody in this country. But if Spain imagines, as the report also indicates, that the United States will be talked into an abandonment of all territorial rights in the islands except for a coaling station she is woefully blind. The obligations which the United States is under toward the insurgents, whom we induced to resume hostilities, and our own commercial interests in the Pacific prevent us from surrendering any of our claims to possession of the whole group. We already have Luzon by conquest, and with our navy and the absence of a navy on the part of the Spaniards we could bring the rest of the islands under our control in a few weeks if the war were resumed. These facts will tell in the commission. Spain's representatives will quickly be made to see that we are masters of the situation, and rather than risk the reopening of a suicidal war they will defer to American demands.

It will be well for Spain to remember that this is not the first time that America has taken part in a peace commission in Paris, and that it is no stranger to the hostile influences which may be exerted in that quarter. The treaty of 1783, by which England acknowledged the independence of the United States, was framed in that city, and the anti-American influences on that occasion were far more powerful and dangerous there than they can be now. Both France and Spain, our "allies" in the war just ended, tried in the peace treaty of 1783 to restrict the United States to the region east of the Alleghenies, so as to prevent this country from acquiring a power which might be dangerous to them in the future. The victories of George Rogers Clark, however, over the British in what is now Indiana and Illinois in the latter part of the revolution gave us claims which could not be set aside. England, our recent enemy, fairer than our treacherous friends, acceded to our demand that our Western boundary be fixed at the Mississippi. The United States, which secured justice when among the feeblest of the world's nations, is not likely to fail now when it is one of the strongest.

The refreshing coolness of autumn will quickly reduce the number of fever cases among the soldiers, provided, of course, the camps are kept scrupulously clean.

The dervish assaults upon the British line at Omdorman were fierce but brief. They were beaten back by striking the rock of Anglo-Saxon courage.

Admiral Dewey is making no remarks at Manila. He has just quietly settled down to see that none of the fruits of victory are overlooked.
