THE MAN WITH THE GUN.

The news record of last week contained two tragic instances of the terrible results of fire arms being allowed in the hands of irresponsible people. Last Tuesday, at San Francisco, Walter Rosser, a drink crazed soldier of the Tennessee volunteers, shot and killed a clerk in a market. Saturday, at Pendleton, Oregon, C. C. Cunningham, also maddened by drink, shot and killed O. Young and seriously wounded Mrs. Julius J. Worcester. In neither case was there the slightest provocation. The murderer in each instance deliberately fired the fatal shot for the pure lust of killing. That he was mentally un-sound at the moment is no excuse for the deed. The extreme penalty of the law should be meted out in each of these cases.

There is need in this country not for more stringent laws governing the carrying of fire arms, but for a more stringent observance of those now on the statute books. The terrible tragedy in Spokane of last year, when a crazed man shot into a crowd on Howard street with fatal effects, is an instance that brings this matter home to the people of Spokane. It may be laid down as sound doctrine that no private citizen has need to carry a revolver or a fire arm of any kind. As a means of protection against criminals it is useless, yes, worse than useless, for an attempt to use it on a desperate man is attended more often with fatal injury to the citizen than to the criminal he hopes to shoot. A private citizen who carries a fire arm in these days in any settled community is either a fool or a criminal, and the laws should treat him as such. So long as the laws in relation to carrying concealed weapons are not rigidly enforced the authorities are not doing their duty and society is in danger.

WE NEED A MERCHANT MARINE

The Iron and Coal Trades Review, of London, after a quotation from our bureau of statistics showing the decline of our oversea carrying trade, says: "It seems hardly possible that with their shipping in such a moribund condition, the Americans seriously menace our great export trade in coal and iron. Shipping facilities are of paramount importance in the development of trade." This assertion is illustrated in the condition of the iron trade between Belgium and the East Indies, which scarcely ten years ago did not amount to more than 10,000 tons. Within the last two or three years it has varied between twenty and thirty times that quantity. Without the important means of communication which the Hansa Company has provided with India, a development of so rapid a character would not have been possible. The present mode of conducting our export trade is about as sensible as it would be for one of the large department stores to trust the delivery wagons of its rivals to carry its sales to their destination.

The fact goes into history that less than 25,000 American troops forced Spain to capitulate and abandon that island with its 200,000 Spanish troops and to give up the war which her brutality had forced. The reader will say: "We knew all this before; why this recital?" The answer is that these glorious achievements ought to be constantly kept in view to restrain the spirit of pessimism now so rife in the country. Would it not be well if the public mind could now be turned to more interesting themes than either the accidents or the faults of army administration, and the world be permitted to see the American people a little better reconciled to their own government than some of our newspapers have represented them to be during the last fortnight?—Cincinnati Enquirer.
