Robert Fulton died yesterday in the hospital at Walla Walla from injuries received in a mysterious manner. He was found yesterday lying beside the railroad track a short distance from town, with his back broken and an abrasion on the head. He never became conscious enough to tell how he was hurt. As his pockets were turned inside out there is a suspicion of foul play. Friends say he had $100 the day before. Fulton came from The Dalles a few days ago. His sister, Mrs. Flora Dell, of The Dalles, has been notified by telegraph.

A serious cave in occurred yesterday on Union Street, opposite the brick school building. A defective sewer washed out the clay underneath the surface, making a trap into which a team might have been driven with serious results. The recent rains softened the surface and caused it to cave in before any damage was done.

The attendance at the Wizard Oil show seems to increase daily. Last evening the largest attendance that has been there since the show opened, witnessed a good program entirely different from that of the previous evenings. Two side splitting comic sketches were rendered while Jerry Sullivan made a hit in his negro turn and monologue sketches. To praise any one turn too highly would not be doing justice to the others, however, as they all did their parts remarkably well and gave the most satisfactory show that has ever been seen in The Dalles for the price.

The most interesting tournament of the season will be bowled at the club alleys tonight between the single and married ladies. The young ladies have taken but little interest in bowling this summer and are consequently somewhat out of practice, while the matrons on the other hand are more in practice, which causes many of the young ladies who are in opposition to them to have scruples about taking part in the match. Those who will take part will be Mesdames Blakeley, Seufert, Huntington, Bradshaw, Fish and Houghton, and Misses A. Schanno, Annie Lang, Myrtle Mitchell, Edna Glenn and Rosemary Baldwin. As there is but five in the latter team, one of the married ladies will have to step out in order to make the sides even.

Along with the marked improvements that are being made on the line of the O. R. & N. between The Dalles and Portland, in the way of straightening and ballasting the track is one of a different character that will prove a preventative of what is probably the greatest source of annoyance to that company on this road, it being to remedy the evil known as the sliding mountain. There is a lake near the top of this mountain almost one-half mile in length and of considerable depth which has nothing but an underground outlet. Its waters find their way to the river through the soapstone formation, and on account of the moisture underneath the surface the mountain is gradually sliding towards the river and taking the track with it. A deep trench will be cut in the mountain which will serve as an outlet for the lake and in this way it will be drained dry and the difficulty overcome.

This morning W. A. B. Campbell had a little adventure which might easily have been his last. He was hunting ducks on the sloughs between here and Seufert's. A band of teal flew to a pond near the river and the only way to get to them was to cross a small arm of the river, which was between him and the island on which the game was. He hastily constructed a raft and started across the stream which was little over thirty feet between either bank. The raft turned over, however, in the middle of the stream, and before he could gain his position on the raft it turned a second and a third time. The raft fortunately drifted into shore and he succeeded in catching on to the rocks and dragging himself exhausted from the cold water. In the turning over of the raft he lost his gun, a valuable Parker, but was well pleased with escaping with his life.

THE BRIGHT SIDE OF LIBBY

Bishop McCabe's Lecture at the Methodist Church.

The Dalles lost its reputation for being a nonappreciative lecture community last evening, when the Methodist church was well filled with an audience who was not only gratified to hear such a noted man as Bishop McCabe, but determined, if there were a silver lining to the dark cloud which has always enveloped Libby prison, to let the chaplain who spent four weary months within its walls, disclose to them what heretofore has seemed an unknown quantity. However, in spite of the fact that the bishop entertained and amused the audience for an hour and a half in relating the bright side of his experience in that terrible place, often there crept into his remarks the hint and a pathos, which showed that the half was not told.

In 1862 Rev. Charles McCabe became chaplain in the 122d Ohio volunteer infantry, and at the battle of Winchester, Virginia, in June, 1863, while looking after the wounded on the field, he, with the surgeon, was captured and taken to Libby prison where he remained a captive for over four months, during which time he was very ill with typhoid fever, being carried out when released and weighing less than a hundred pounds. He was known as the singing prisoner, and history tells us did much to brighten the existence of his comrades during those terrible days, although in his address he gave much credit for the small ray of sunshine which entered within the walls to the wit of seven Irishmen, whom he says were the life of the prison. He also said that among his comrades were some of the brightest minds he ever met; Neal Dow, the temperance reformer, being one of them.

The lecture was intensely interesting throughout, and his tribute to old soldiers at its close stirred every heart, while loud applause greeted his hope that war would soon (or as soon as the Turks were conquered) wear itself out, and in the mouth of our cannons wrens build their nest and no sound issue from them save the sweet warble of her voice in song.

BIG FAIR IS OPENED.

Exhibits and Music Combine to Pleasurize Relation of the Fair to Returning Prosperity.

The Oregon Industrial Fair opened its doors last night for the season of 1898, under circumstances of special advantage and distinction. For the first time since 1897 the country and the city of Portland are prosperous. Bountiful crops, good prices and active trade made a condition of universal cheerfulness. The nightmare of hard times has passed; hope and the spirit of progress are in the air; better days have come.

The Industrial Fair in its beginning grew out of two large motives, one looking to an annual exposition of the productions, industries and resources of the country; the other seeking to provide an interest great enough to attract the people of the Northwest to its trade and commercial center, and so bind the country and the city together by the ties of acquaintance and friendship and the sympathy which always springs up between those who know and understand each other. It was planned to make of the fair a sufficient attraction to withdraw the people of the Northwest a little while each fall from the grooves of humdrum occupations, to expand their knowledge and to refresh their spirits. "Our annual fair," remarked a man very active in organizing the first of the series some twenty years back, "will be Portland's annual invitation to the country to come and spend a little time with us and see another side of human life and human effort."

In the vicissitudes of time and fortune there have been seasons when neither city nor country had the leisure nor the spirits for a period of pleasuring. Good times and bad times have been reflected in the entertainment which Portland has offered to the country; but the ideal which inspired the foundation of the annual fair has never been lost. The purpose still remains to show the conditions and the possibilities of our country, and to bring together its people for the variation and refreshment of their lives and for their better mutual acquaintance and sympathy.

FOR THE PROTECTION OF GAME.

An Effort Will be Made to Have the Legislature Adopt New Game Laws for Eastern Oregon.

The following is a condensed copy of the revised game laws which are being drawn up by the sportsmen of Eastern Oregon for further protection of game.

It is noticeable that the game birds as well as mountain and salmon trout are being rapidly exterminated, and in order to further protect them many of the sportsmen of this section of the state are desirous of having game laws similar to the following, presented to Commissioner McGuire, who will endeavor to have the same acted upon by the legislature. All sportsmen are requested to offer suggestions or make corrections on the following laws. Anything of this character should be in the handwriting of the party sending the same and should be signed by them. The following are the laws:

1. To prohibit the killing of deer, elk, moose, mountain sheep, antelope, etc., for the term of five years.
2. The open season for grouse, August 1 to November 1.
3. The open season for prairie chicken, August 1 to October 1.
4. To limit the taking of trout of any kind, including the so-called salmon-trout under four inches in length, the open season for trout to be from April 15 to November 1, this law to include all the known kinds of trout.
5. To protect all streams against any kind of explosive material and saw dust and to prohibit any lumbering or manufacturing company from using any stream in Eastern Oregon to float timber in or any kind of wood or manufacturing material, as the same carries more or less sawdust or rotten wood.
6. To limit the number of birds killed in one single day by one person to ten.
7. To protect the mountain quail and bob white or any other kind of quail or pheasant in Eastern Oregon for three years more.
8. To prohibit the sale of any kind of game or water fowls or trout in the public markets of Eastern Oregon.

He leaves Lewiston carrying with him the highest appreciation of the large audience that heard him." GEO. E. KNEPPER, Pres. Normal College, Lewiston, Idaho.
