THE DALLES, OREGON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1898

NO 172

THE WORK OF THE OREGON LAW MAKERS

First Week of the Extra Session is Ended.

HOUSES ADJOURN UNTIL MONDAY

Sixty Bills and Twenty-five Resolutions Introduced in the Senate, and Thirty-six Bills and Thirty-five Resolutions in the House.

SALEM, Or., Sept. 30.—Both houses of the legislature adjourned early this afternoon until Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, and most of the members left town on tonight's trains. Speaker Carter will spend Sunday with his constituents in Ashland. A good many of the members went to Portland for the recess. The clerks of the two houses were left at their desks to clear the way for Monday's work. Everything about the state printer's office is running at high pressure to get the bills already introduced in shape to lay on the desks of members Monday.

In the senate sixty bills have been introduced, and have gone to the printer. Some twenty-five resolutions have also been handled there. In the house the number of bills introduced is thirty-six, and resolutions, including joint and concurrent, thirty-five.

A number of the members have bills they are withholding, because they are convinced that no general legislation will be enacted at this session. In fact, the great number of admittedly meritorious measures brought forward for consideration promise to consume more time, if they get proper attention, than will be available at this session. It is probably that the greater number of bills already introduced will not get to final vote at this session.

The most objectionable feature of the introduction of such a multiplicity of measures is that it is likely to delay action on those of really pressing importance. Still, the committees in both houses are so made up that the meritorious are likely to be carefully separated from the unmeritorious and pushed to prompt action.

The first week closes with a distinct promise of long steps in the direction of economical legislation.

Representative Butt, of Yamhill, this morning introduced by request a bill for an act to regulate the rights of persons to examine public records and make memoranda and transcripts from them and declaring an emergency. It provides that officers having the custody of any state, county, city or town records, of any court in the state, shall permit and furnish proper and reasonable facilities for the inspection and examination of the records and files of their respective offices, and for making memoranda and transcripts therefrom, whether said files be complete or incomplete; during the usual business hours, to all persons having occasion to examine them for any lawful purpose, without cost or expense to the person making such examination. Complaints in suit of actions are to be withheld from public inspection until summons shall have been served.

WRECK IN NORTHERN SEAS

Captain of the Vessel Washed Overboard and Drowned—Wreck Reached by the Farallon.

SEATTLE, Sept. 30.—News has reached here of the wreck of the schooner Capella in northern waters. September 16th the ship left Ballard bound for the north on a fishing cruise. She carried a crew of four men. On the morning of September 20th, when about 150 miles north of Cape Flattery, the schooner was caught in the teeth of a furious gale. Huge seas swept over the little vessel from bow to stern, carrying away the boats, hatches and everything that was moveable on deck.

Captain Jonas Nordhassel, of the schooner, was caught by a large wave and carried overboard and drowned. H. Lipse, one of the crew, was also washed overboard, and several of his ribs were broken by the force of the waves as they beat upon him. He was rescued, however, by his shipmates after a hard struggle.

With only two men to manage her, the Capella now began to drift northward at the mercy of wind and waves. The mainmast had in the meantime snapped off close to the deck, and the foremast threatened to go every minute. All the fresh water and provisions had been destroyed by the salt water, and for six days the crew subsisted on canned fruit and vegetables, which was all that was left. For water they drank the juice of the canned fruit, and what they managed to squeeze from tomatoes.

On the morning of the seventh day the men met some Indians, from whom they obtained water. They then continued to drift northward until 7 o'clock on the morning of the 27th, when in Seaforth channel they sighted the steamer Farallon coming toward them, southward bound. As the steamer approached, one of the men got out the fog horn, and its dismal notes reached the ears of Captain Roberts. The Farallon was promptly brought up alongside the dismantled schooner, and the men taken aboard. The schooner was taken in tow, and Captain Roberts headed for Bella Bella, the nearest port. Here the Capella was beached, and, leaving one of the crew in charge, the Farallon resumed her voyage.

Captain Nordhassel leaves a widow and four children, who reside at Ballard. He was part owner of the schooner.

H. R. KINGAID FOR SENATOR

Fusionists, It is Said, Will Launch His Boom Next Tuesday.

SALEM, Sept. 30.—The Statesman today says it can announce the choice of the demo-populist-fusionists in the legislature for United States senator. This distinction has fallen upon the shoulders of the retiring secretary of state—Hon. Harrison R. Kincard—who will be launched forth with a flourish of trumpets next Tuesday.

UNDER BRITISH ADMINISTRATION

Canada will be Allowed Access to the Yukon by Way of Lynn Canal Under Treaty Now in Preparation.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 30.—A Quebec special to the Colonist says:

British Columbia's contention regarding the Alaska boundary is not to be pressed. The Canadian commissioners will concede that the boundary line under the treaty follows the line of the coast. But, as compensation for giving up her claim in Behring sea, Canada is to be given the right of access to the Yukon country at the head of Lynn canal, and either Dyea or Skaguay will be turned over to British administration.

The international commissioners will decide the question themselves, they not desiring its reference to another tribunal.
