Says: "The fool saith, 'Put all thy eggs in different baskets;' which means, scatter your money and your attention; but the wise man saith: 'Put all your eggs in one basket, and watch the basket.'"

We have only one basket, and we are watching it in optics. Having made a thorough study of the subject, graduating from three of the best colleges, we are enabled to give you a scientific examination. It doesn't matter whether you buy a $10 glass or a $1 glass, or any glasses at all, you get an examination, and a thorough one at that, which alone is worth your time to know your eyes. I fit all cases of eyes, and am permanently located in The Dalles. I am no traveling fake, and best of all I guarantee all work in optics to give you entire satisfaction.

Yours to serve,

CLOVER CUSHION.

Blossoms Are Dried in the Sun and Cheesecloth Used for the Undercasing.

You love couch cushions. You have made them of everything, from scrap paper to fine needles, and you are sure that there can be nothing new under the sun in couch cushions. But there is—a delicious suggestion which you will adopt right away and pass on for adoption.

Last year a girl who spent her summer in the country carried back in her trunk the most fragrant, the most crispy cool of sofa pillows.

All winter long she kept the secret of its makeup. The Egyptian embalming process was not more jealously guarded.

A week ago she revealed it. "It's a clover pillow," she said. "I'll tell you now, because clover is coming and you girls will all want to make one."

This is her recipe:
Arm yourself with a broad brimmed hat and a pair of shears and take along a couple of clean, empty sacks.

Cut off the finest sprays of clover bloom and with these mix about half as many leaves. Avoid hard stems and sticks. Fill your sacks.

When your sack is tied and full put it on the grass where the sun can best shine upon it. You will find by the time the second bag is stuffed the contents of the first one will have wilted to one-half size. The bag will need refilling.

When the sacks are brought home spread a clean sheet under a sunny window and on this empty your treasure.

Spread the blossoms out evenly and cover with a second sheet. Let them remain there for several days. Shake them up and respread them several times each day until the leaves crackle when pushed between the fingers. They will then be ready for the pillow.

An undercasing is, of course, a necessity. Cheesecloth makes an excellent one for a clover cushion.—Chicago Tribune.

Sober and Suspected.

This is how he came to swear: It was four a. m. when he got home. He didn't fumble around the latch for an hour, stutter in his talk, or awaken everyone in the neighborhood with an unseemly noise. He was sober; hadn't drunk a drop.

Instead, he struck the keyhole at the first attempt and entered. All was quiet. He put his hat and coat on the hall rack and was about to take off his shoes before going upstairs, when an old, familiar voice sounded gratingly on his ear:

"Is that you, Jack?"

"Yes, Nell."

Then he began: "It's three minutes after four. I did not let the cat follow me in. I've just returned from one of our cancanes. The gas is turned down low. The doors are all locked; the windows fastened. I paid the taxes this afternoon. Mary's baby's got the measles. That isn't our log barking."

And when he tumbled into bed Nell looked at him out of sleepy eyes and said:

"Jack, you've been drinking."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Her Idea of Beau.

The ideas of children as to the beaux of kitchen maids are sometimes rather limited.

"Maggie," said a little girl not long ago, "have you a beau?"

"Why, of course, I have," replied Maggie.

"Well, then," persisted the little one, "what is he—a policeman or a street car conductor?"—Chicago Post.
