THE AMERICAN REJOINDER.

The rejoinder of the American peace commissioners to the Spanish reply in the matter of the Philippines emphasizes two points: First, that when the American government, at the request of Spain, submitted terms on which peace negotiations would be conducted it declared that Spain must accept or reject them in their entirety. These terms were practically identical with those that were afterward embodied in the protocol. Second, that when the Spanish foreign minister sent his letter of Aug. 7th, making the point that Spain a priori reserved her sovereignty in the Philippines, the American government presented the protocol as the only basis for peace negotiations. Spain accepted the protocol without further communication, verbal or otherwise.

This illustrates the difference between American and Spanish diplomacy. It was understood in this country and in Europe that there was to be no higgling over terms of peace. The United States presented a plain, direct proposition which Spain was to accept or reject. If she rejected the proposition, our army, with guns trained on the Spanish lines in Porto Rico, and our army and navy, with guns trained on Manila, and our battle-ships ready to sail for the coast of Spain, would proceed on instructions that contemplated the crushing of Spanish power not only in the West Indies, but in the far East and in Europe. Spain was the suppliant and the United States was dictating terms. Spain accepted, and no questions were raised as to the meaning of the protocol until the Philippine question came up at Paris. Then the Spanish commissioners brought forward the letter of Aug. 7th, as though it was an authoritative interpretation of the terms of the protocol.

This contention was absurd on its face, but it was in keeping with Spanish diplomacy. It was most desirable that any ground for suspicion or any doubt as to the position of this government be cleared away at once. The statement of the American commissioners makes it clear to Spain and to all Europe that in this controversy the American idea of diplomacy is to prevail.

Spain was at the mercy of the United States when she asked for peace. Her navy had been destroyed; one of her strongholds in Cuba had been captured; an army of 100,000 men was ready to strike at Havana; our navy in the Atlantic was foot loose to strike at Havana, or at the Spanish coast; the only Spanish stronghold in the Philippines was practically in our hands, and General Miles was tightening his grip on the Spanish army in Porto Rico. Without allies, without a navy, with a demoralized army, and with revolution threatening at home, Spain accepted the terms of the United States, and these terms are to be carried out.

Great Britain will not join in the proposed conference to be held in Rome for the purpose of taking action to suppress anarchism. Should the time ever come, however, when England shall be menaced by anarchism she will find a way to suppress it without calling a conference.

"Coin" Harvey not only demands $1 a head from the friends of free silver throughout the United States, but specially requests that the money be sent to the home office, and not intrusted to agents. There are some features connected with the financial operations of the country which Harvey understands as well as anybody.

Not very many years ago a certain Gen. Weaver was going about the country with an elaborate array of figures purporting to show how the Republican party had bankrupted the Iowa state treasury. At present the state debt amounts to exactly $200,000, all of which will be paid within six months, to the intense disgust of the Weaverites.

A Sure Sign of Croup.

Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves them much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take.
