LATEST OBJECT LESSON.

Admiral Dewey has raised the Spanish cruisers, Isla de Cuba and Isla de Luzon, which were sunk during the battle of Manila. Both have been floated and are locked at Cavite. The Admiral's intention is to have them fully repaired and fitted out to re-enforce his fleet.

The two vessels in question, while not of the latest model, were among the most effective protected cruisers of Spain's Pacific squadron. Each had a displacement of 1,030 tons, a speed of sixteen knots, and a crew of 160 men. Each carried four-inch Hontoria guns, four six-pounder and two three-pounder rapid-firers, two machine guns, and three torpedo tubes. They were lighter than the Marblehead and Montgomery of our own fleet, but carried as heavy armament. Light-draught vessels will be needed in the Philippines, and in raising the two Spanish cruisers Admiral Dewey has made a valuable addition to his fleet at trifling expense.

If it is deemed important to save the third-rate cruisers sunk in Manila bay, how much more important is it to save the first class Spanish cruisers sunk in the vicinity of Santiago. One of these, the Maria Teresa, was raised and floated and is now at the mercy of the storms at Cat island. The government is making every attempt to save the vessel, and, even though this be accomplished at great expense, the people will approve the work. The same course should be followed with the Cristobal Colon, the Vizcaya, and the Almirante Oquendo, which went down with the Teresa in the battle of Santiago. These vessels were the pride of the Spanish navy. They came to American waters under the command of one of the best naval officers in Europe. They were blockaded in Santiago harbor by our fleet, forced out of the harbor by the victory of our army, and in one of the greatest naval engagements of history were sunk by the guns of the American warships.

The Cristobal Colon, the best vessel in the Spanish navy, was not injured in battle. She was run on the beach, surrendered, and was taken possession of almost immediately by the Americans. All the injury to her was done by water and it was believed at the time by the most experienced officers on the ground that she could be raised without great difficulty and added to the American navy at an expenditure of one-fourth of what the vessel originally cost.

Even if the Vizcaya and the Oquendo cannot be raised with profit the experiment should be tried with the Cristobal Colon. This vessel, the pride of the Spanish navy, was constructed at a cost of $3,500,000. If she can be floated, and repaired so as to become a cruiser in the American navy, she will remain for years a memorial of American valor on the sea. Wherever she might go, in home waters or abroad, the first thought would be of the victory of the American fleet at Santiago, and the Cristobal Colon would be a constant reminder to the young of the high place won by our navy through superior courage, discipline, and skill.

Uncle Sam has just discovered that he owns an extensive range of mountains in Alaska hitherto unmarked on the map. As the country expands these little accidents to the atlas are likely to occur from time to time.

The people of Havana are eager to see the United States flag unfurled over the city. Old Glory carries with it the pledge of stable government, honest administration and prosperity.

There is a little bit of Spanish sovereignty left at Iloilo and the armed Filipinos are likely to capture the town at any moment. Sovereignty in the Spanish mind is a glittering abstraction.

A Sure Sign of Croup.

Horseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves them much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take. REEFTON, New Zealand, Nov. 23, 1896.
 I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this particular remedy than of all other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficacy, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children.
