

Opportunities for Money Saving.

Bargains always bring results. That has been our experience. What we propose now is a bargain sale which shall be general throughout our store. The cream of the season's goods are here at prices way below the ordinary, and if quality is the test of cheapness you'll surely find these goods cheap. Our store is very interesting just now—and very busy. But it will be busier later on. The most leisurely, comfortable holiday shopping is to be done right now.

PEASE & MAYS, The Dalles, Or.

use their skates. The cold spell seems to be general throughout Eastern Oregon, as the exchanges report low thermometers all along the line.

Again this morning residents awoke to the fact that they were without their usual supply of water. Those who had not read THE CHRONICLE last evening, which told of yesterday's experiences in thawing out pipes through the city, expended what little water the kettles contained in attempting to thaw the pipes, but to no avail. It appears that the water in the small reservoir was not sufficient for the extra supply it is intended to furnish at present, but as soon as men had been sent to the creek near Judge Bennett's place, from whence this reservoir gets its supply, to turn an extra amount in, the difficulty was overcome and the city had enough for all purposes.

Many complaints have reached us as to the lateness of the hour when the CHRONICLE makes its visits at their homes. We would say that such a state of affairs has been unavoidable for the past few days, as one of its carriers is quarantined on account of scarlet fever in the family. We have secured another carrier, and hope to see you earlier. But take us in when we do come, no matter how late we may be. Last evening as a reporter was walking on Fourth street a paper blew in front of her. Not knowing that it was the CHRONICLE and being afraid some team might be frightened by it, it was picked up, when what was our surprise to find the only family journal in the city. Its all right to search for news all day, but to have it blown back at us after working hours is unkind to say the least.

For fear the CHRONICLE may be thought to be too severe on shows which visit our city and be considered a "chronicle" kicker, we quote the Pendleton E. O. regarding the "Pulse of New York" company. After roasting them mercilessly he says: "They should be hooted out of the towns east of here towards which they are traveling. It would be an insult to the race of hens to use even rotten eggs with which to drive them from the stage. And were cabbages to be thrown at the combination by an enraged audience, all the vegetable world would revolt, and justly, too. Let the public stamp with their disapproval such frauds. Let theatre managers refuse them engagements. Let them be discountenanced in every manner possible. They injure the stage and injure local managers and deserve nothing better than does the bunco steerer or the confidence man."

W. H. Reeves Seriously Injured.

This morning, as the west-bound freight reached Grants, W. H. Reeves, who is an engineer, but who was acting as brakeman on this run, attempted to come down the ladder on the side of the engine. When throwing himself off, his foot caught in the V formed by the main rail and the guide rail, throwing his right leg under the train. The foot and ankle were terribly mashed. He was brought at once to this city, where his mother, Mrs. Reeves, and sister, Mrs. Perriano, reside, and taken to the Umatilla House, where Dr. Doane and Logan dressed the wound. Tomorrow he will be taken to the hospital in Portland. It cannot be determined at present as to how serious the injuries will be, or whether or not the foot will have to be amputated.

NO BETTER PLACE.

How Dalles Farmers Supply the Markets in Other Cities.
It is amusing to note just how much of a figure Dalles products cut in the Portland and other neighboring markets. In looking over a report of the vegetable market in Portland, published in a recent copy of the Oregon Agriculturist, it was flattering to notice how many different products were shipped from The Dalles.

In speaking of green corn, egg plant, water melons, musk melons, green peas and numerous other vegetables, and fruits as well, our section of the state is mentioned more frequently than any other. It is particularly noticeable that our farmers are the first to ship their supplies to these markets, taking the lead, as usual, in this matter.

Not alone in this particular, but in many, do we find that The Dalles is not a nonentity, but it is famous everywhere for its wealth of resources. How often have those who are old residents taken cognizance of the fact that those of their neighbors who, having amassed wealth here and becoming uneasy, remove to other places, only to lose what they left with, and in time return, coming to the conclusion that they had made a mistake in turning their backs on a place of such varied opportunities for gaining a livelihood. It would have been well for such had they looked before they leaped.

There is sufficient proof all around us that a person may look far and wide before finding a better city to choose as their abiding place than The Dalles. An undertaker in an Idaho town recently received the following letter: "Sur, my wife is ded and wants to be berried tomorrer at wonner klok; yo no whur to dig the hoal bi the side of my other 2 wifs—let it be depe."

Lieut. Bartell informs us that the militia company is now ready for organization, the requisite number of men having been secured. They are now awaiting the arrival of Adjutant-General Tuttle from Portland, to whom word has been sent.

Last night at Portland Mr. G. H. Woodbury, purser on the Dalles City, was married to a Portland young lady, whose name we could not learn. Without doubt her name is now Mrs. Woodbury, and friends in The Dalles, for Mr. Woodbury has many here, extend their congratulations and wish them well.

Being informed that our electric lights had failed to connect, a commercial traveler appeared in the city yesterday with the new style hats for the gentlemen, which, if adopted in The Dalles, will light the city sufficient. They are fedoras of a fiery red and very bright blue shade. Let them come in, we need something of the sort.

Everybody along the line knows Grandma Munra, who formerly kept the eating station at Bonneville, and whose log cabin dining room at Meacham now is just as popular with all travelers. She is to be highly honored by having her picture printed in Manssey's magazine, holiday edition. This is done at the request of the proprietors of the journal, who know the extensive reputation of the Log Cabin and its admirable hostess.

Joe and Gus Bonn returned this morning from their trip through Colorado and the eastern states. They report a most enjoyable visit with friends, who vied with one another in affording them a good time, but when the thermometers got down to eight and ten below zero and the Mississippi was frozen over, the boys thought turned homeward. Of the many places which they visited and investigated, they say The Dalles beats any of its size and its people compare more than favorably with those of any place, being right up to date.

The Dazzler is the next attraction, which appears at the Vogt Monday evening. The company consists of twenty-six people. The costumes are new as well as the songs and dances and the Dazzler for 1898 shines like a new dollar. The ladies quartet, which was one of the pleasing features of the Dazzler last year, has been retained for the present season. A couple of new voices have replaced the old ones, resulting in a decided improvement in the singing, and an entirely new set of selections have been arranged for their voices.

The minimum thermometer this morning stood at 16° above; but later the sun came out, and, although cold, the day was beautiful. A stray boy might have been seen here and there with skates in hand, for ice on the small ponds was strong enough to uphold the small fry, while the remainder of those who enjoy this sport are hoping that the weather will continue cold enough so that they too may have occasion to
