SENATOR HOAR'S SPEECH.

Senator Hoar has great learning and remarkable powers, and he has applied these to an able address in opposition to the retention of the Philippine islands. We have heard the biggest gun which can be fired There is only from that side of the field.

His speech turns on a fanciful construction of the constitution- a construction which never has had application, which was not applied nor imperfect hearing, and when it is ensought to be applied by the statesmen who framed the constitution. Even Jefferson, the extreme exponent of Democratic principles, never attempted to put the fanciful construc tion to the constitution which Senator flamed condition of the mucous sur-Hoar would now apply. It is no answer to say there were not so many Indians as there now are Filipinos. The principle in one case is identical with that in the other.

Jefferson was not permitted to out stubborn opposition. It was de- this remedy as a specific for La Grippe, clared that he was proceeding in and its exhausting after effects. Never violation of the constitution; that expansion was fraught with peril, and the safe course for the young nation small and compact empire.

However, as a matter of fact, Senator Hoar is declaiming against something which is not contemplated by the administration nor by the people. He is assuming that the United States by De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. Beis going to rule the Filipinos by ware of worthless imitations. There is not the slightest danger of the American people withholding freedom and liberal government from any people. The danger lies rather in the other direction-in the probability that we shall try to clothe the Filipinos with Investion olicites. the higher functions of citizenship before they are capable of their wise exercise or worthy of the blessings of complete sovereignty. The assumption that there is danger of the United States forcing wrongs and oppression on the people of the Philippines is too fanciful for serious consideration .- Spokesman Review.

At the beginning of the current year there was in the Oregon state treasury a sum total of $763,699.23. of which $191,237.62 belonged to the general fund, the bulk of the balance being money of the irreducible school fund, principal and interest. The liabilities of the state were at that time not one cent. The state of Oregon has no debt at all. There are no bonds on which to pay B S HUNTINGTON interest.
