AMERICAN ASSISTANTS.

The confident young revolutionist who claims the sovereignty of the Philippines as his personal property, and who assumes to be a bigger man than Uncle Sam and Magellan combined, has been much disturbed in his plans since his daily dispatches from Washington were cut off. The comfort and aid desired from that source are found now to have been the larger half of his inspiration. To sit idly in his "capital" near Manila and not to hear of Senator Hoars' elaborate Filipino orations, of Mason's impassioned flights of fancy about the consent of the governed, and of Hale's resolve to vote against the treaty, though the Maine legislature votes unanimously the other way, is a painful state of affairs for Aguinaldo. The day hangs heavy when no synopsis of sympathetic eloquence flashes from the Potomac to the Filipino couriers on the Pasig. Gen. Otis holds the cable and has paralyzed the tender cords of affiliation and mutual encouragement that have hitherto vibrated between Aguinaldo and his backers in the American senate.

In addition to this benumbing blow Aguinaldo has discovered that he can no longer import rifles and ammunition from Hong Kong. What is the use of grabbing a historic sovereignty if his trouserless army can not get guns and cartridges to assist in negotiating a national debt and getting appropriations? Aguinaldo's army is understood to number 12,000, chiefly boys who have no property of their own to lose. They receive no pay, but expect plenty of booty when the United States is scared away and they proceed to help themselves to whatever they want in Manila as the only true original representatives of the consent of the governed. They know this is so, because they used to have a daily assurance of it from Washington before the cable was censored, thus severing the genial current that added each day to Aguinaldo's demands and the size of his hat. In the sacred name of liberty Hoar, Mason and Hale should demand the instant opening of the cable, so that their burning words may reverberate in Aguinaldo's camps, nerving his street boys, uniformed in a straw hat, to open fire upon the American flag.

The Duke of Devonshire kept well within bounds when he said that "at no period within our recollection have our relations with the United States been more friendly than they are at the present moment." He could have gone farther and said that at no period within this century have the relations between the two countries been anywhere near so friendly as they are now. Some controversy has sprung up every few years since the war of independence and the war of 1812 to create ill-feeling between the two nations. The northeastern and northwestern boundary disputes in the days between the war of 1812 and the war of secession created several disagreements, extending over a long series of years. Then came the Trent affair in 1861, the Alabama claims controversy half a dozen years afterward, and the various fishery disputes in more recent years, with the Venezuelan affair in 1895. At no previous time since 1763, when the war ended in which England and her American colonies expelled the French from North America, was there so much real cordiality between the two branches of the Anglo-Saxon race as there is at this moment.

No Right to Ugliness.
The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate the stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store. 2

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.
