DEEP SNOW IN MANY PLACES

Heavy Fall, Followed By Rain and Lower Temperature.

LONG CREEK, Feb. 8.—Grant county has in the past few days experienced the coldest weather known to the earliest inhabitants. Since Friday night the thermometer has registered constantly at from 5° to 30° below zero. Up to this time the winter had been an excellent one for stock. Considerable hay had been fed out, and many who had not supplied themselves with hay were compelled to pay exorbitant prices for the article, which they did rather than sacrifice their herds. Should cold weather continue the loss in Grant county will be enormous. Sheep and cattle are already beginning to succumb, and it is impossible to purchase any more hay.

NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA

To Gain Flesh, to Sleep Well, to Know What Appetite and Good Digestion Means.

MAKE A TEST OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS.

No trouble is more common or more misunderstood than nervous dyspepsia. People having it think their nerves are to blame and are surprised that they are not cured by nerve medicine. The real seat of the mischief is lost sight of. The stomach is the organ to be looked after. Nervous dyspeptics often do not have any pain whatever in the stomach, nor perhaps any of the symptoms of stomach weakness. Nervous dyspepsia shows itself not in the stomach so much as in nearly every organ. In some cases the heart palpitates and is irregular; in others the kidneys are affected; in others the bowels are constipated, with headaches; still others are troubled with loss of flesh and appetite with accumulations of acid, sour risings and heartburn.

It is safe to say that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure any stomach weakness or disease except cancer of the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, loss of flesh and appetite, sleeplessness, palpitation, heartburn, constipation and headache.

Send for valuable little book on stomach disease by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich. All druggists sell full sized packages at 50 cents. Prof. Henry W. Becker, A. M., the well-known religious worker and writer of St. Louis, secretary of the Mission Board of the German Methodist church; chief clerk and expert accountant of the harbor and wharf commission; public secretary for the St. Louis school patrons' association, and the district conference of the stewards of the M. E. church; also takes an active part in the work of the Epworth League, and to write on religious and educational topics for several magazines. How he found relief is best told in his own words:

"Some weeks ago my brother heard me say something about indigestion, and taking a box out of his pocket said: 'Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.' I did, and was promptly relieved. Then I investigated the nature of the tablets, and became satisfied that they were made of just the right things and in just the right proportions to aid in the assimilation of food. I heartily endorse them in all respects, and I keep them constantly on hand."

An Englishman's Impression of Greater New York.

Americans Come in for a Generous Share of Praise for Their Correct Conduct—Some Curious Things.

Had the initial stage of existence been ordered under different circumstances, and I had been given the choice of a birthplace, I might have elected to be born an American citizen—somewhere outside of New York. For what is one to say of a city that will not permit you to carry pickles through the streets on the seventh day nor allow you to kiss your best girl on the sidewalk on any of the others? I might not want at any period of life to do either one or the other of these proscribed acts, yet if it should happen that I did I should hate to call my own that city which forbade me.

Indeed, the niceties of life in New York have been somewhat of a puzzle to me. I have not been permitted to smoke a cigarette while walking along Fifth avenue with a lady, but I have been allowed to take her to the theater and occupy a front seat in the stalls without donning evening dress—a thing no lady would tolerate in London. Spanish cities are famous for their noises, but New York I found to be noisier than any three of them. My nerves were at a tension during the whole of my visit. It is not an unceasing, distant rumble that soon becomes so discomfort, as in London, but a succession of jarring, jerky noises, distracting to the senses. Why you tolerate it I cannot understand. What with cable cars, the "E" railroad, the cabs and carts rattling over roadways with no pretense at paving, and the thousand and one street cries, New York is a perfect inferno of clamor.

Indoors I find another curious thing—curious, you must remember, to the Englishman. You heat your houses to suffocation and then drink gallons of iced water to keep cool—to the ruin of your digestion, temper and nerves, until you have become the most dyspeptic people under the sun and the special prey of the quack-medicine venders. You claim to be a sensible people, and yet your candy stores are filled every day by crowds of struggling women who eat indigestible pastry to such an extent that the graveyards of America contain more tons of gold than of teeth.

The New York man does not hustle as much as you would have others believe. In fact, you don't work, man for man, so hard as the Englishman. But you think quicker and larger, and you think more than you work. You have a great idea, tire of it halfway through because another greater idea has come to you, and leave your subordinates to work out the minor details of the first scheme, with the result that it is never wholly finished. The average Englishman will see the thing through from beginning to end, and give his whole attention to the smallest detail. Yours is a city of diversified thought and aspirations. The one thing in which you seem to have a common mind is that you should wear a crease down the front of an old pair of trousers.

As to you generally, you are the kindest and most hospitable people on the face of the earth. This I say without reservation, and every Englishman who has visited your shore will bear me out in my statement. You never seem to tire of extending to him civilities and courtesies such as overwhelm a sensitive man, whether it is in showing with just pride the wonders and resources of your great country, or spending your dollars or your time in his service. To one gentleman, who would not wish me to identify him by name, I owe a deep debt of gratitude for all he did for me—a stranger—and his, I believe, was a spirit that pervades you all.—Leslie's Weekly.

The Foot of the Reindeer.

Everything in any way connected with Alaska and the Klondike is of special interest at present, and among other items the foot of the reindeer deserves particular mention. The forefoot of the horse to a great extent determines its value, as upon this portion of its anatomy its speed and endurance depend. The foot of the reindeer is most peculiar in construction. It is cloven through the middle and each half curves upward in front. They are slightly elongated and capable of a considerable amount of expansion. When placed on an irregular surface, which is difficult to traverse, the animal contracts them into a sort of claw, by which a firm hold is secured. When moving rapidly the two portions of the foot, as it is lifting, strike together, the hoofs making a continuous clattering noise, which may be heard at a considerable distance. It is this peculiarity of the feet that makes the reindeer so sure-footed and so valuable in that rocky and uneven country, where almost any other animal would prove a failure as a beast of burden.—N. Y. Ledger.

Government Breeding Them for the Purpose of Producing a New Kind of Silk—An Interesting Experiment.

Some very remarkable bugs are being hatched and reared just at present by the experts of the government bureau of entomology at Washington. Most people would suppose that there were enough insects in existence without resorting to artificial propagation; but the fact is that this kind of scientific work has a very useful purpose in view. This, too, notwithstanding the fact that the species selected for breeding are the most pestiferous or "insectary," as it is called, is a brick building close by the department of agriculture. In construction it resembles a greenhouse, the upper part being of glass, so as to admit plenty of light for the insects. It is divided into two compartments, one of which is artificially heated for the benefit of tropical and other species that require warmth, while the other is cold. On shelves all around the interior, and on the floor as well, are glass jars and queer glass-sided boxes containing a great variety of odd-looking objects.

The objects in the glass jars are parts of plants, fruits, dried-up vegetables, pieces of branches or roots, etc. One does not see any bugs at all, and the reason why is simply that the vegetables, fruits and so forth are the natural food of the insects, and the latter are either inside of them or else are "done up" in cocoons for the winter. For example, there is a huge cocoon nine inches long hanging from a twig in a jar of exceptional size. This is the temporary communal dwelling built by the so-called "gregarious butterfly" in Mexico. More correctly speaking, it is the caterpillars—that construct the cocoon for a residence while they are undergoing their metamorphosis. The cocoon looks and feels as if made of thick parchment, and at the lower end of it is a small hole that serves for a door. The labor employed in building it must be enormous. Under a powerful magnifying glass, it is seen to be composed of an infinite number of shining and very slender silken threads, crossing each other in every direction. When cut into, the nest is found to contain 100 or more chrysalids, attached to the walls on the inside—each one representing a future butterfly.

The habit of combining together to build a house seems to be peculiar to this species among butterflies. The silk composing the nest is exquisite, and from 20 to 25 sheets of it can be stripped off from the great cocoon as if woven in a loom. If the silk could only be spun, the "gregarious butterfly" would soon displace the silkworm, and the silks and satins of commerce would be of butterfly manufacture. Unfortunately, the difficulty remains unsolved, though many attempts in this direction have been made. Could a solution of the problem be found, silk would become at once enormously less costly, inasmuch as the cocoons of this kind of butterfly are to be gathered in immense numbers as a wild crop in the forests of Mexico.—Boston Transcript.
