He was found in the woods under the left front wheel of his wagon. Appearances indicate that he had been thrown from his load of wood while crossing a rut, and pitched headforemost between the singletree and the horse on the left side. He was caught under the wheel, and when found about midnight, was lying face down with the wheel of the loaded wagon resting on his back. He had held to the lines, which were bound under him, preventing the horses from going further, and being unable to back formerly of this city, aged 17 years. Interested?

Spain continues to furnish our principal amusements, for at the theaters one hears Spanish plays, the Basque ball players, the "pelotaris," continue to attract great crowds, and now we are about to have a season of bull fighting with Manzantini as the "espada principal," accompanied by a first-class troupe of performers. But even more sensational will be the advent of "the lady bull fighters," now on their way from Spain to this land of winter sunshine. "Las tereras," or the feminine fighters of bulls, will be greeted with enthusiasm, for they will be a distinct novelty, and are bound to make an impression on the susceptible masculine public. And why not lady bull fighters as well as the "new woman" of northern and colder lands? The girl who enters the arena to confront the "toro The richest gold strike made for some bravo," the flerce bull pawing the sand, months is reported from McDonald and, head down, awaiting his human tiring age until November 13, 1909. At the first alarm, at dead of night, one could awaken one's lady bull-fighting consort with: "Oye, tu, Mariquita de mia alma, get up quick; 'here's some one in the dining-room packing up the silver!" And the wife of your bosom, arrayed in a wrapper and carrying her trusty sword in her hand, would descend to the lower floor to give the burglar an "estocada" in the most classic and approved form! I don't think the new woman of the north can approach in interest the cor-"feminine new departure" responding coming out of Spain in these days. In Georgia a female company of militia has been formed, and the gallant governor has a lady colonel on his staff. Chicago presents women footpads who assail and rob male victims in the most approved style of highwaymanship. Everywhere lovely woman is making progress, and it is fitting that the Latin races should produce, as their choicest exhibit, the lady bull fighter!

In Mexico the woman doctor has arrived, and is building up a clientele, and we have also a woman lawyer, besides innumerable teachers of the "female persuasion," all bright, capable and energetic young women. Women are being employed in the national postal service and are giving satisfaction. Soon they will begin to invade the great government departments, and will supplant the languid young dudes who now smoke cigarettes incessantly and manage to kill time at the government expense. The dudelet of the national palace and of the government offices outside is a study in pink shirts and tall collars. He certainly toils not, although he spins yarns in office hours,
