NOW THE TURKEY FOOT.

A New Charm That Is Worn by the Superstitious.

The Rabbit's Foot, So Long Popular, Has Been Displaced by the New Mascot-An Old Negro's

The rabbit's foot is not in the race any longer as a charm. What has caused the downfall of bunnie's hind foot as a protection against all evil and an assurance of perpetual good luck for its happy possessor is rather a puzzling question and one which the fair sex and the advocates of the new fad would find it hard to explain. Perhaps the late presidential campaign may have had something to do with it. Every one knew that the silver candidate was presented with a rabbit's foot immediately upon receiving his nomination, and that the mascot complied with all the requirements of the case, for it was "the left hind foot of a molly cottontail, that had been killed in the full of the moon, at 12 o'clock at night n a graveyard, by a red-headed nigger."

Well, the rabbit having enjoyed so reat and so long a run of popularity, n the natural course of events, the time has come for him to step down and out. He has done so, and his place has been taken by one of the kings of the farmyard—the lordly turkey.

Fashion decrees that in order to be lucky one must wear in some manner or possess in some shape or other a turkey's claw.

This fad is so new that it has hardly reached the counters yet, except in one or two shops which pride themselves upon bringing out all the most exclusive novelties. Of course, it will eventually become as common as the craze for rabbits' feet, but to-day it is a very difficult thing to find a turkey's claw prepared in the proper style for a charm against bad luck.

The most popular style at present is the natural claw, properly treated by a taxidermist, its shank covered by a silver or gold cap set with an amethyst, Jas. G. Walker and family arrived in turquoise or the new green stone, the city last night from Moro, being which resembles an emerald. The tip called hither by the serious illness of his of the nail is covered with a gold or silver cap, with a fine chain to match L. E. Crowe came up on the evening the cap from the shank to what one might call the wrist of the claw, and a pretty scarlet ribbon bow with long ends tied just below the shank.

In one case I saw one profusely bejeweled, which was intended for a cabinet. As dress ornaments they are, so far, but little used, though I was told Regular meeting Christian Scientists they were being fashioned into clasps

I asked an old colored man if he had ever heard of the turkey's claw as being an unlucky or lucky charm.

"Why, yes," he replied. "Down south, the fashion of stealing anything, but if you can only steal your turkey for the Regular services at the Christian holiday dinner you will have good luck keys, and the darkies would go in the night, just at 12 o'clock, and steal the birds."

"But what about the claw? What

"Why, bless your heart, don't you know that the turkey's foot is an awful lucky thing? You must take the claw after you have cleaned your tursalt, bury it, you better say, in a dish of salt for a whole week, and let it lie there, so that all the bits of flesh which stick to it are cleaned away, and your you take it out and scrape it and clean over your door, and no bad luck, sickness or anything can come in during the year."

"Will it keep out death?" "No, ma'am, it will not. Don't you konw sometimes death is the biggest day school at 12:15. Junior Endeavor at piece of good luck that can happen to

> "But do you know why turkey's foot is lucky?"

"I never heard but one reason, and that was that after the devil had tempted Eve and was crawling away after getting her to eat the apple, he came across the turkey's path and the turkey lifted up his right foot and struck at his head. The blow was so hard that the devil was stunned for a moment. And that is the reason of the turkey's right foot being lucky against bad fortune."-N. Y. Herald.

The Enchanted Mess of New Mexico Again Visited.

Second Party of Explorers Find Traces of Former Inhabitants of the Elevated Mountain Plain.

The top of the Enchanted Mesa of New Mexico was at one time inhabited. It has been proved that Indian traditions should not be dismissed as merely mythical after only casual explora-

This has been demonstrated as the result of the trip of F. W. Hodge, of the bureau of ethnology, Smithsonian Institution, who has just returned from an expedition to the mesa, The Enchanted Mesa of New Mexico has excited the interest of scientists and the daring of exploring parties. It was brought into prominence a few weeks ago by the expedition of Prof. William Libbey, of Princeton university, who took rope-throwing mortars, huge kites, balloons and tons of apparatus to scale this hitherto inaccessible table-

The purpose of the investigations has been to determine whether the summit of the mesa was at one time inhabited by the prehistoric Acoma Indians. Prof. Libbey reported no evidences of early occupancy. Mr. Hodge's explorations have brought different results, however, for after scaling the mesa he spent some time on the summit, found a number of fragments of pottery, arrows, shell bracelets, stone axes, etc., establishing conclusively that the top of the mesa was at one time the home of hu-

Mr. Hodge was sent by the bureau of after. ethnology to examine a series of ruins in western New Mexico and to attend the snake dance of the Moki Indians. This done, he was directed to proceed to the Mesa Escanada and scale its precipitous walls in any way he saw fit. He procured an extension ladder, comprising six sections of six feet each together, with an ample supply of rope, and proceeded to the mesa September 3, accompanied by Maj. George H. Pradt, deputy United States surveyor at Laguna, N. M., who is familiar with that section; A. C. Vroman, of Pasadena, Cal., who acted as photographer of the expedition; H. C. Hoyt, of Chicago, and two Luguna Indians.

The most was determined to be 431 feet from the western plain to the top of the highest pinnacle above the cleft, and the talus, at the base of the cleft, 224 feet above the plain. The climb was without any serious difficulty until the party reached a great sandstone. The ladders were hauled section by section to this point by means of the ropes, then fitted together, and raised against the cliff.

Mr. Hodge ascended to the top and elimbing over the slope immediately above, lashed the top of the ladder to a huge bowlder that had fallen from above and lodged on the terrace some 20 feet from the summit. The ladder was then ascended by the remainder of the party and the top easily reached.

The ascent consumed exactly 21/4 hours. The explorers had not been on the summit of the mesa five minutes before Maj. Pradt picked up a fragment of ancient pottery, which indicates clearly that the mesa had been visited, at any rate, in former times, and that Prof. Libbey was mistaken in his conclusions. During the afternoon and the stomach. They cure sour stomach, gas, next day Mr. Hodge examined the ground critically, while Maj. Pradt man secured a number of photographs. Several potsherds, two stone axes (broken), a fragment of a shell bracechief evidences of former occupancy found on the narrow storm-swept crest, but abundant potsherds, etc., were found in the talus swept down from the summit. All vestiges of the ancient trail ascending the talus and continued thence to the summit by hand and foot holes in the solid rock, have the hole remain. This verification of an Indian tradition, notable for inherent evidence of accuracy, is peculiarly gratifying to students of anthropology.

Prof. Libbey's ladder was discovered still lashed in place above the crevasse, Mr. Hodge's researches will arouse great interest among American ethnologists and archaeologists. - Chicago Times-Herald.
