Down the Hudson

superintendent, Mrs. S. French, says. by Clarke & Falk. regarding a trip down the Hudson:

"Now we start down the Hudson, whose famed scenery is known even in our little town, The Dalles. Winter's mow has hidden very largely its beauty, for I am sure its reputation consists not in the rugged baldness of its cliffs and high banks, but in its green grasses and trees. Our road is along its eastern bank, and that is very much like the southern bank of the Columbia at The Dalles; while the western bank is high, and near the city, rocky. Am sure you have seen views of the palisades of the Hudson; these may seem high, abrupt, and grand to Eastern eyes, but to one whose ideals have found realization in the grand mountain cliffs of our noble Columbia, they are insignificent affairs. True, there are wooded hills on both sides of the river in places, and one spot views of the mountains where they meet below The Dalles, only the hills had lost considerable in height. These have many evergreen trees on them, but the trees are dwarfs besides the firs of Oregon. All the way along on the highlands we saw many magnificent homes, and many towns of considerable size, with smoking chimneys that marked the busy factory; in fancy we hear the whirr of many wheels and watched the throngs of operators supported by these mountries.

"The Hudson was frozen over, and many hundred men and horses were gathering the glittering ice into the large see houses that almost continuously line the river sides.

"We also saw great numbers of ice boats, those affairs that the magazines tions it first. The greatest German marriage ceremony was performed in have so cleverly and truthfully pictured assources of easy and very enjoyable building of the walls of the city by When the minister said: "I pronounce pleasure to their owners. tightly lashed to their maste.

"The day was delightful, the sun great city the snow was fast disappearing, and our last look at the Hudson showed a broad stream free of ice and full of boats and shipping."

How to Prevent Pneumonia. You are perhaps aware that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of La Grippe. During the epidemic of La Grippe a few years ago when so many cases resulted in pneumonia, it was observed that the attack was never followed by that disease when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was used. It counteracts any tendency of a cold or La Grippe to result in that dangerous disease. It is the best remedy in the world for bad colds and La Grippe. Every bottle warranted. THE MURISTAN.

A Historical Site in Jerusalem Grauted to Gerrany for Its Nevr Church.

The Muristan, the site of the new German church at Jerusalem, was granted to Germany by the sultan in 1869. It is in the middle of the city, near the Church of the Sepulchre, and no spot was richer in remains of the in particular reminds me of our Western Latin domination-to say nothing of the Saracenic ruins. In the reports of the Palestine Survey there is a photoraph of a fine Gothic window by Lieut. Kitchener R. E .- to-day the sirdar. That window, together with portions of cloisters, a belfry and a rich double of a great gold-bearing field in this doorway, belonged to the Church of St. Mary, built in 1130, a little earlier than the beautiful church outside the Fulk. The bazars east of the Muristan, notably the meat market, are medieval, and west of it lie buried beeath the soil the buildings of the great ospice of the Knights of St. John.

shone brightly, and as we neared the Sale of the Blood-Stained Vent Worn by Charles I. When He Was Behended.

> The sum of 260 guineas bid recently for the "sky-colored vest" worn by King Charles I. on the scaffold is not an exorbitant price for a relic at once authentic and ghastly. Nothing is lack-ing that might make a good Jacobite's flesh creep. The stains of blood have been religiously preserved by a succes sion of royalist owners, and it has been pointed out that of the 13 buttonholes only 12 had been fastened. The top button had been removed, so that the Illustrious victim might more easily have his neck to the executioner. "He nothing common did or mean, upon that memorable scene, but with his keener eye, the ax's edge did try.' Such was the testimony of a republican poet, and there is no doubt that the sad dignity with which "Charles Stuart' comported himself in his last days roused qualms of remorse among some of those contemporaries who had been harshest in their judgment of his public policy. Admiration of the man went far to redeem the faults of the king and with posterity he became at once the most sympathetic figure in the history of England-not even second to Mary Queen of Scots. And of her nobody will ever believe, let the Dryasdusts bring forward what documentary evidence they please, that, she painted her face and wore false hair

> It is pretty certain, if the purchaser of King Charles' silken raiment ever thinks of allowing that precious possession to pass out of his family, that it would fetch far more than he has given for it. Placed in any museum it would always be thronged with sightseers; the combination of royal associations with grewsome memories would be quite irresistible. The most superior person is attracted, though he may deny it, by such horrors as a book bound in human skin, or by instruments, like the Maiden of Nuremberg, which he knows to have been used for torturing real men and women to their death This reliah of bloodshed-as distinguished from mere love of adventurous deeds-has given vogue to whole schools of romancers; it helped to account for the sudden popularity of Mr. Rider Haggard's tales, as it made the fame of Maurus Jokai. The taste is, no doubt, morfid, and ought not to be encouraged. But it is natural, and has to be taken into account. And the psychological interest of it is to show that we are not, in our feelings, so far removed from our barbaric ancestors as we like to think,-London Standard.

How soon can the Soudan be made to

As for the heart of the Soudan, Khartoum, and beyond, it is not yet in the Egyptian possession, and it is still an nown quantity, its resources hardly explored.
