FRIDAY.....FEBRUARY 24, 1899

Agualdo is said to be a great lover of music. He draws the line, however, at an American quickstep.

It will soon be Hawaii's turn to hold a World's fair under the protecting folds of the great American flag.

The fundamental cause of all the trouble in the United States army seems to be that the war with Spain was too easy.

Great Britain and the United States have pooled issues at Apia, and will vote for Malietoa for king for the ensuing term. This practically insures his election, as there are enough warships anchored in the harbor to insist upon a fair count.

"We may regard the situation before us as a burden or as an opportunity," said the president at Boston, "but whether the one or the other, it is here, and conscience and civilization require us to meet it bravely." Those who consider the Philippines a burden can study these words with advantage.

CHIEF DANGER TO OTIS.

General Otis, governor of the Philippines, believes the problem of pacification will be solved when he has the leaders of the revolt in his guard house. If the plans of the administration do not miscarry; the scamps who have been leading the ignorant natives to ruin will be brought up with a round turn. There is danger, however, that the war department contemplates meddling in the Philippines. Up to this juncture it has kept its hands off, and there has been a succession of victories and not a single mistake. If Otis and Dewey begin to receive orders at long range the prolongation of the rebellion may be safely counted upon. Admiral Dewey is now cutting off supplies from Asiatic ports and General Otis sees to it that the insurgents are given little comfort in the islands. The combination, unhampered, will win in short order. If Secretary Alger attempts to run things from his Washington office the only solution of the problem is to cut the cables and delay the mails.—Spokesman-Review.

WHAT THE WORLD THINKS.

What the English Saturday Review says is not always pleasant but it is usually close to the truth and is valuable as reflecting faithfully the opinion of a considerable portion of the British race. Its statement in regard to the war investigating commission that, "It is an astounding scandal to find officials who are responsible for the gross irregularities and mismanagement of the war carefully whitewashed, while a plain dealing soldier like General Miles is discredited," shows that the political character of the so-called "investigation" is understood in Europe.

The opinion held by the Saturday Review is the one held by the world. Records may be altered and efforts made to change history in the interests of the incompetent officials who so lamentably failed in their duty at the time of the greatest need, but the world knows the truth. Algerism will always be regarded with contempt.
