As usual few votes were cast in the election for clerk and school director today, and as far as we have heard there was only one candidate for each office.

Messrs. J. H. Carlock, W. R. Manning and M. P. Page, of the U. S. Geological Survey, registered at the Umatilla House Saturday night. They are now engaged in running a level from Astoria up the Columbia river to Spokane. At present they are working down about Mosier, and will be in this locality in about two weeks. Their headquarters are here for the present.

Alex McLeod came in from his ranch at Kingsley yesterday. He says the farmers are nearly done with spring plowing, and some are already plowing their summer fallow. He says he has never seen better prospects for fall grain than there is on Tygh ridge, south of Dufur, but on this side the prospects are not so good. The ground is well soaked, and with other things favorable Tygh ridge will yield one of her usual large crops in 1899.

Good music hath many charms for Dalles people, which fact was well attested this noon when the Noble Company's band gave a concert in front of Kinerly's drug store. If their company is as good as the band, we are to have a treat tonight; and we have every reason to believe it is from the press notices given them. Among others our old stand-by, the East Oregonian, gives them a splendid send off.

A number of Dalles people were on passenger trains Nos. 4 and 2, returning from Portland last night, and upon reaching Cascades came to the conclusion that they were booked to take up their abode there for the night at least, a landslide being reported just this side of that place. No. 4 reached there about 3:50 and remained until about 12 o'clock; while No. 2 was sidetracked at Bonneville, arriving here within a half-hour of each other, the first at 2 o'clock and the last at 2:30.

The loss of stock in Crook county during the winter of 1898-99 may be now safely estimated as not worthy of mention. From all sections of the country come reports of light losses, and stock in fairly good condition. A recent heavy snowfall in the foothills assures us not only a heavy growth of grass during the coming season, but ample water for irrigation. Indeed, Crook county, Oregon, has few peers and no superiors on the Pacific coast as a stock country.—Crook Co. Journal.

This year is to be the year for "going West," and there will be no end of immigrants coming our way. The railroads are doing their best to settle up the Northwest, and the Great Northern and Northern Pacific have made a rate of $25 from St. Paul to Portland, going into effect today. The Canadian Pacific and "Soo Line" have met this rate from Eastern terminals to Puget sound points. On and after the third Tuesday of this month and the first Tuesday in April the Canadian announces a round-trip first-class rate of $52 from St. Paul.

The Saturday soirees given by Smith Bros. have been a source of great enjoyment to a large number of dancers. Not only those belonging to the class, but many outsiders who appreciate a good floor and good music, attend every week. These were much disappointed to learn from the Times-Mountaineer last week that Saturday night's soiree would be the last. This was a mistake; it was not the last nor the least, and so thoroughly enjoyable was it that everyone was glad to have Mr. Smith announce that he intended to have the soirees continue, although his dancing class will be closed for this season.

First, last and all the time The Dalles boys hold the medal. This time they lead at the seventh annual Oregon inter-collegiate oratorical contest, which occurred at McMinnville Friday night. Eight different colleges were represented, and Homer Angell, of the state university, who took for his subject "Our Spanish War—Justice, Motive and Effects," was awarded the first medal which is of gold, and valued at $25, being the best ever given by the association. The Eugene Guard says of Homer: "He is one of the brightest members of the student body, and very popular for the close attention and thoroughness which he exhibits for every phase of college endeavor. Mr. Angell has been successful not alone in this contest but in athletics as well. He is one of the bright star guards who did so much to win for the football team its splendid victories and good name during the past season."

FELL TO HIS DEATH.
A Dreadful Accident Which Caused the Death of Roderick McNeil.

The deepest regret is felt throughout the entire city over the dreadful accident which occurred yesterday morning, taking in an instant the life of one who for years has been known as one of the most honest, hard-working men in the city—Roderick McNeil. While the accident must have happened early in the morning, 'twas not till between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon when Henry McNulty was standing at the door of his home on Second street, opposite the bridge, that he noticed a figure lying in Mill creek, and called his sister's attention to it, when she advised him to go for Marshal Lauer. He did so, and when they reached the creek just underneath the main bridge they saw the body had lodged in the middle of the channel, the water being too shallow to admit of its floating further and an iron hoop causing it to lodge there. At first they could not determine who it was, but upon looking closer found it to be the body of Roderick McNeil, Coroner Butts being summoned, the body was taken to Crandall & Burget's undertaking parlors, where an inquest was held this morning, the verdict being as follows:

We, the jury summoned by W. H. Butts, coroner of Wasco Co., Or., to inquire into the cause of the death of the body now before us, after a careful examination of the body of the deceased and after hearing the testimony of the witnesses produced before us, and after due and careful consideration and deliberation find as follows: That the name of the deceased was Roderick McNeil, whose age was about 50 years and that his residence was at The Dalles, Or., and that he came to his death on the 12th day of March, 1899, in The Dalles, Or., by accidentally falling off the railroad bridge immediately west of Main street, about 45 feet into Mill creek and drowning in said creek about the hour of 4 o'clock a. m. of said day.

Dated Dalles City, March 13th, 1899.
It seems that it has been a custom of Mr. McNeil to occasionally walk to his farm near Mosier, where his family resides, either going on Saturday evening or Sunday morning. About 4 o'clock yesterday morning William Allatt says that he met Mr. McNeil going down Second street, and that he turned the corner at Union. It is supposed that he started to cross the new bridge on his homeward journey and reaching the end of the walk, in the darkness stumbled and fell, the distance being about 45 feet, falling on his back in the creek, and stunning him so that he had no power to help himself. The wonder is that his neck was not broken, or that he was not badly mashed falling such a distance, and it has been a question in the minds of some whether he did not fall from the foot log above, but nothing could be found to justify such a belief. The only marks on his person were a slight bruise on the back of his head and a small red spot on one cheek, so that he must have drowned in his struggle after falling. The body floated about twenty feet till it reached shallow water.

For the past twenty years Mr. McNeil has been foreman in the carpenter shop of H. Glenn, and no more trusted employe could be found. His life has been one of constant work in the endeavor to support a large family, and having done his duty well, it seems hard that such an end should have been his. He was particularly thoughtful, assisting in many ways the family of his deceased brother, A. McNeil. He made provision for the wants of his children when he should leave them, having $2000 life insurance with the Catholic Knights of America.

A year ago last November his wife died, leaving to his care ten children, who are now orphaned. The oldest, John, is now a sergeant at Fort Robison, Neb. Another, Walter, aged 18, is at Weiser, while Joe, who is about 20, assists a 15-year-old sister in caring for the farm and six younger children. Mr. McNeil was 48 years old last January, and a man in good health and willing to bear his share of life's burdens, which were not light in his case.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the Catholic church. Friends invited.

MAYS & CROWE'S NEW STORE
An Ornament to the City Rises Out of the Ruins of the Conflagration Last August.

Time after time has The Dalles been tried in the fiery furnace, but just so often has she phoenix-like arose from the flames, each time more bright and with more of a determination to prove herself undaunted. The last conflagration of note was that on the night of August 14th, just seven months ago tomorrow, and, in that short time, from the mass of ruins has arisen many buildings which far discount those consumed.

On the corner of Second and Federal streets stood the hardware store of Mays & Crowe, which had been fitted up so completely that it was the pride of the town; but this with the rest was swept away in a few hours. Many were afraid that having suffered such a loss, the firm would be so discouraged that they would hesitate to rebuild. But no sooner were the ashes cold than plans were being formulated for a new building, and today the last load of goods will be
