Silk Shirt Waists

Will make every Heart Leap for Joy.

BY EXPRESS WE HAVE RECEIVED OUR first installment of Silk Shirt Waists, and for beauty, style and workmanship, they are perfect gems. Another important thing is there are not two alike, so that your neighbor will not be seen with your waist on.

Some of these may be seen in our window on the corner of Second and Federal streets today.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

"East Lynne" Tonight at the Vogt.

Smith Bros. call attention to their score tomorrow night at the Baldwin. The "wearing of the green" was very prominent in our city today. This was the only manner in which the 17th of Ireland was observed here.

It is gratifying to again see James Blakeney on our streets after his long sojourn at the hospital in Portland. He is, however, still walking with crutches and will be compelled to spend about a month more in Portland before he will be from under the doctor's care. He will return Monday.

G. L. Hutchin, formerly a resident of Bloomington, Ill., but now of Portland, is in The Dalles today. It is Mr. Hutchin's intention to, in the near future, start a daily paper in Portland, having Democratic proclivities. Should the project be carried into effect, we wish for it a much longer life than its predecessors. There should be ample room in Portland for two large dailies.

The most enjoyable dance ever given by the Rathbone Sisters was that which took place at the K. of P. hall last night. About fifty couples were on the floor, and to make dancing comfortable the small hall had to be opened, and the piano moved to a position between the folding doors. Birgfeld's music was so inspiring that none could keep from making the most of it and joining in the good time.

Ed Smith, holding the lucky number which drew the prize at the theater last night, took up his bed-room set and walked. It was a fine one, too. Tomorrow night a parlor set will be given away, and the numbers which have been given each night will be good for the drawing on that occasion. The Smith boys are particularly lucky of late, James having won the mandolin raffled Monday night by J. Rees.

Tomorrow afternoon Noble's Dramatic Company will give a matinee, beginning at 2 o'clock, when "Kathleen Mavourneen" will be given. This is a very pleasing play, and it will be a splendid opportunity for the ladies and children to hear the Noble company. This company has greatly pleased our citizens by their ladylike and gentlemanly conduct during their stay in our city, proving themselves refined both in their demeanor on and off the stage.

Although the audience which attended the Vogt last night to hear Noble's company in "Train Wreckers" was not large, it was a very appreciative one, and the play was well given. They have been requested to appear in "East Lynne" tonight, and, as the play has for years been a popular one, no doubt they will have the best house of the week's engagement. The Baker City Republican speaks very highly of their production of this famous play, giving each actor a share of unstinted praise.

Now is the time to induce your friends to come West and view a country worth living in. The Union Pacific has fallen in line with other routes and has cut rates to California points, and local officials expect to receive notification every day that reduced rates will be made to apply to Portland. The Southern Pacific will be forced to fall in line next or else lose considerable business. The Northern Pacific has gone the other roads one better and made cheap rates apply to all intermediate points in its territory. In fact, the fight is warming up, and some more slashing of east-bound rates is expected.

Keeping the sidewalks and streets of a city in repair is one of those endless tasks which keeps multiplying as the work advances. A small stretch of walk to which our attention has been called as being one which demands immediate attention, is that on Eighth street, between Court and Union. The course of true love would certainly never run smooth if that walk had to be passed over between the courting and the union. It has been sadly in need of repairs for some time, and the need should at once be met.

Another instance of the petty little robberies being carried on by tramps in our city at present was shown early this morning when a man, who was arrested for drunkenness and vagrancy, was found to be in possession of a pair of Indian clubs, which he had been trying to dispose of. These small thefts are only forerunners of more serious robberies which will be committed in the city unless these fellows are compelled to leave. They should not be encouraged by having their requests for hand-outs granted by our citizens.

A few of the gentlemen friends of the Ladies' Aid Society will make their debut in the entertainment line next Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, when the ladies will take a back seat, where they will be enabled to take a few pointers in the art of entertaining. The drawing card of the evening will be the selections by the new male quartet club, just organized. W. H. Wilson made a trip to Portland yesterday to procure the latest quartet music, both in classic music and the most catchy coon songs.

A two-story brick addition, 120x97 feet in dimension, will not only be a wonderful improvement to the Umatilla House, but add much to the appearance of a block which every visitor to or traveler through the city is bound to see. Having bought the property adjoining the hotel, Sinnott & Fish now have workmen tearing down the old shacks which have stood there for years, and will in the near future, if not at once, build such an addition to their hotel, the lower floor to be used as a dining room and the upper partitioned into rooms. We are much pleased to hear of this project, and hope nothing will prevent its consummation.

Many will remember well one of McEwen's leading hypnotic subjects named DuBois, who visited the city with the great hypnotist on his first visit; a very effeminate looking fellow, who started out independently from this place as a full-fledged hypnotist, and who when last heard from was humbugging audiences in every part of the country. It appears that he has about reached the end of his string from the following notice regarding him: "A hypnotist named DuBois, and his company arrived at Cle Elum the other night from Roslyn, closely followed by a wagon load of indignant young boys who claimed that they had been engaged by the hypnotist to go into trances and do what ever he asked on the stage at Roslyn, and that he had not paid them as he agreed. After a stormy scene in the office of the Reed house, a compromise was effected, and the boys departed for home. They say that he has no hypnotic power whatever."

The Consequences of a Comma.

The importance of so small a matter as a comma becomes evident by the perusal of the following: In his court King Charles was standing on his head, a golden crown; and his royal brow was wrinkled in a most portentous frown.

Fifty courtiers entered walking on their hands, were bright, set in rings of gold and silver; what a rare and splendid sight.

Four and twenty noble ladies, proud and fair and ten feet long. Were the trains that flowed behind them born by peages stout and strong.

In a bower of fragrant roses the magicians now complete, blowing trumpets with their noses, they inhale the fragrance sweet.

See the queen, how sad and tearful as the king cuts off her head, One bright tress of hair at parting and she wishes she were dead. -G. W. Willis.

ST: PATRICK.

Who He Was, and What His Mission-- A Paper by Mrs. S. L. Brooks.

The following paper was composed by Mrs. Brooks and read at the St. Patrick's party given by the Ladies' Aid Society, at the residence of Mrs. J. C. Hostetter, last Wednesday afternoon:

The 17th of March has by common consent been consecrated to the memory of him who is called the Apostle of Ireland. History is very indefinite as to its account of him, France, Scotland and Wales being given as the place of his birth. In his confession he himself says he was born at Bonavem, Tabernia. The last name, meaning camps, was given by the Romans to the district south of the Clyde, and also to one near the river Usk in Wales. Either of the two is better authenticated than that of Boulogne, France.

In some of the incursions of the Picts or Scots, common at the time, as the Roman power was declining to hold these people in abeyance, when about sixteen years of age he was taken captive and sold to a petty chief of Ireland, where he remained for about six years, then making his escape back to his home in Britain.

During his stay in the island he seems to have become interested in its people so as to decide to devote his life to their service, though as he says himself, it was in opposition to the wishes of his friends; but he claimed to have heard their call, "Come over and help us."

His name is said to have been Sociat, Patrick being from the Roman indicating patrician. His father's name was Calpurnius, and evidently a Roman officer of some authority, also a convert to the Christian faith as he is called a deacon. While history, when separated from the mythical and supernatural, gives us so little of detail, the fact that his name has come down through the ages from about the fifth century, kept evergreen in the memory of the warm-hearted people whom he went to serve, proves him to have been a man of more than ordinary ability. Dealing cautiously and gently with old pagan superstitions, even preserving some of the Druidical altars and transforming many of their rites and customs to the Christian faith he was endeavoring to inculcate.

His "Confession" reveals him a devout, simple-minded, unlettered man, and a discreet, energetic missionary. Such men belong to no especial age, race, or clime, but are the heritage of the world, and we, on the shores of the Pacific, can unite with the people of the Emerald Isle, washed by the Atlantic's surges, in commemorating the memory of St. Patrick, whether the 17th of March be the day of his birth or his death. The life spent in service is what we would honor.

"Wondrous and awful are thy silent halls, Oh kingdom of the past! Whatever there was of true life in thee, Leaps in our ages veins. For thy martyrs die; thy prophets see; Thy poets still are singing."
