WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

A free health lecture will be given at the Viavi offices, over French's bank, next Thursday at 2:30 p. m.

The latest railroad rumors embrace one that says the Columbia Southern railroad has been absorbed by the O. R. & N. Co. Next.

While the salmon are not yet so much in evidence as they might be, the river is again rising and they'll be moving along swimmingly in a few days.

We learn that Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Biggs are expected to arrive home this evening. Their friends will be more than pleased to again greet them after an absence of very nearly a year.

The $50 required to be paid for a license to give a glove contest within the city limits, having put a quietus on the "entertainment" at least this side of the river) Smith Bros, will give their usual Saturday night soiree. All who so enjoy these hours of dancing are invited to be present.

The services being held by Elder C. P. Bailey at the Baptist church are proving very interesting and productive of good. This evening the meeting will open with a service of song, and partake of the nature of a praise service.

A coat of paint never was so noticeable or did so much toward improving a building as does that now being placed on the laundry building on First street. Having been neglected for so long a time, makes the clean white paint so much the more noticeable.

The new show windows in C. F. Stephens' store are about completed, and add greatly to the appearance of the building. A. M. Williams & Co. having also placed large windows in their shoe department, are now painting the front of the building.

A young lady was riding down the sidewalk a few days ago when her wheel shied, and she was thrown to the ground. A gallant young man standing near by, hurried to the scene at the same time exclaiming, "Did you fall?" "No," said she, "I got off to see if I could find a four leaf clover."

The payment of the 20 per cent extra pay to the soldiers in the Philippines has been extended to include all our soldiers now in service, and will continue until hostilities in the Philippines cease. The troops in the Philippines, both officers and men, will be given the two months extra pay when mustered out.

It being suggested that the "bachelors," in making their schedule of prices of admission to their coming social Friday night, were manifesting a vindictive spirit towards the old maids, in assessing them 50 cents a head,—we gathered from a conversation with one of the alleged bachelors today that their reason for so doing was that the old maids, being always instinctively attracted to any assemblage of bachelors, would likely occupy a large portion of the seating capacity of the Christian church, therefore the bachelors took the proper precautions and made the above charge.

In mentioning the valuation of the estate of Horace Knight, deceased, in yesterday's issue of THE CHRONICLE, we gave it as $80,000. It is generally supposed that newspapers are allowed a certain margin for exaggeration; but there is a place where exaggeration ceases and "prevarication" begins. While THE CHRONICLE did not intentionally misquote the figures, we were misinformed to such an extent that were our readers mentioned in the will they would certainly receive a great disappointment, as the estate is valued at $15,500, about a fifth as much as we gave.

And now the Commercial Club comes to the front and is organizing a band, to be called the D. C. & A. C. Concert Band, under the direct supervision of the club and composed of club members. It will consist of eighteen pieces, and two concerts a month will be given at the club rooms; presumably on the veranda during the summer months. The work of getting the members together is already pretty well along, and whatever the club undertakes is sure to be a go, so no doubt we will soon be indebted to the club for another pleasure we would not otherwise have enjoyed. It will not only be beneficial to the club, but to the city as well. It beats the bard how energetic these club members are.

Dr. Siddall is determined to see what is to be seen in the mining districts of Alaska, and to that end will leave tomorrow afternoon for Portland, where he will join a party and start for the Atlin district, so much talked of this year. When the doctor reaches there we may expect to get reports which will be unvarnished, and know the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The doctor being an old resident of The Dalles and having hosts of friends here, starts out with all sorts of good wishes for the success of his trip and we all hope he will discover something in the Atlin which will so far rival what he might have obtained had he reached the Klondike two years ago, that he will thank his lucky stars that he delayed his trip.

Last evening as the august board of directors, with dignified bearing, were seated in the directors' room at the club discussing weighty matters, suddenly there flew through the transom above the door a delicate little note. Strange it was to see the reserve and wise expression change to an eager look of expectancy as each member started from his seat with the assurance that the missive was directed to him by his wife. It, however, transpired that it was a partnership affair, addressed to the board and containing a special request from the ladies that the doors of the club be opened to them Saturday evening that they may witness the contest game between the club team and the Ladies bowlers of Salem. Needless to say the request had been foreseen, and they are to be received with open arms. That is, providing there is no "rooting," which the ladies understand to mean that there is no favoritism to be shown, or undue applause. Dalles ladies understand the situation.

Their Return.

Their seems to be a diversity of opinion concerning the idea of demanding that the volunteers be returned home. Governor Geer says:

"I can't see that the state has any right to ask the president to send the volunteers home. They enlisted in the service of the government, and if there ever was a time when they have been needed it is now. It seems to me that it is a piece of impertinence to ask that they be returned. I feel confident that the president will order them home as soon as possible, and until he does so I cannot see what right the states have to interfere."

"Few, if any, of the volunteers from Oregon are asking to come home. In fact, I am constantly in receipt of applications for promotion, and some who have been discharged and returned home have asked to be returned since the war began."

IMAGINARY HYDROPHOBIA.

Such is Said to Be the Disease of a Young Woman at Colville, Wash.

A brief dispatch from Colville published yesterday told of a remarkable case of what appeared to be hydrophobia at that place, the victim being Miss Nettie Fogg. The case as it now develops is one of the most peculiar that ever occurred in the Northwest. Hysterical imaginary hydrophobia is what it might be termed, for the young woman was never, to the knowledge of her relatives and friends, bitten by a mad dog.

Saturday she was thrown into a series of convulsions that seemed as if it must terminate fatally. She barked, gulped food and lapped water like a dog, and twisted and turned her body as a dog in agony would. Suddenly she righted herself and with a vicious snap seized one of her thumbs between her teeth and would have bitten it off, but for interference. A few seconds after this Nettie began to bark, growl and snap just as a dog does when irritated. She remained in that condition for about five minutes when another spasm took her and the united muscles of three were required to hold her. In periods of semi-consciousness she would point to a scar on her breast and say "Garfield did it." On inquiry, it was learned that Garfield was a dog for many years in the Fogg family. One of the sisters said Nettie had told her that the dog had bitten her about nine years ago. The dog at one time was suspected of being mad, but recovered from the seeming attack.

It is thought Nettie was bitten by the dog and had been greatly frightened thereby, thinking she might some time contract hydrophobia. Being of a nervous temperament and recently in poor health, the theory is she worked herself into a hysterical condition, when she imagined she had hydrophobia and developed all the symptoms of that malady, something not unusual in the history of medicine.

In Favor of Colorado Springs.

Chas. H. Gleim, traveling freight and passenger agent of the Colorado Midland Railway, is in The Dalles. The purpose of his visit to our city is to interest the Elks in the matter of holding the grand lodge meeting of 1900 in Colorado Springs. The national meeting this year is to be held in St. Louis in June, and by instructing their delegates to vote for Colorado Springs as the meeting place of the following year, the Elks have no idea what a favor they will confer on those who are permitted to attend. To one who has been privileged to visit that beautiful place, and take in the grandeur of its surroundings—Pike's Peak, the Garden of the Gods, Cheyenne Canyon, and numerous other places fully as wonderful, the very idea of such an opportunity is enough to create any amount of enthusiasm and cause one to wish he might be a delegate.

A trip over the road which Mr. Gleim has the honor of representing is enough to induce all to vote for Colorado Springs. No route could be chosen which would give delegates a better opportunity to see scenery which must of necessity be remembered for a life time, as every newspaper representative who had the privilege of traveling over that route last year will affirm.

This winter has proven an exceptionally hard one on the railroads of Colorado, on this road in particular, which for seventy-seven days was tied up with a blockade of snow which surpassed any previous blockade in its history. One can scarcely believe the weather bureau contains facts when it gives the fall of snow during the winter along that road at 21½ feet; but such were the reports.

Mr. Gleim will visit various lodges throughout Oregon and as far as San Francisco, in the interest of Colorado Springs for a meeting place in 1900.
