WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Don't fail to see our young folks in "A Summer's Fancy" Wednesday night. This morning the clerk issued a marriage license to A. McDonald and Miss B. F. H. Wyse, of this city.
On account of the illness of Mrs. N. Harris' little son, the social which was to be given at her home next Saturday evening has been postponed.
Remember the prize dancing contest tonight at Smith Bros' soiree at the Baldwin. All who frequented these soirees may enter the contest.
The Epworth Leaguers will hold a sunrise prayer meeting tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock at the Methodist church. All young people are invited to attend.
A baptismal service was held at Dufur yesterday, when Mrs. Moorhead, of Dufur, was baptized in the stream which runs by the city, yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock.
Fifteen carloads, or 600 cattle, were shipped from the Saltmarsh stock yards yesterday afternoon to Kiddle Bros. of Island City, Union county. They were bought by Frank Taylor.
A baker advertised for help thus: "Wanted, a young man to assist baker. Must be well bred, can loaf two days in the week, and get his dough on Saturday night, or every night if he kneads it."
On another page will be found the rules and regulations issued by the water commission of our city. Read them and co-operate with the commission for the best interest of consumers.
Monday evening the John Griffith

Company will appear at the Vogt and present "The Avenger." Judging from the splendid notices given by the Oregonian, the company must be a good one.
Yesterday afternoon in Justice Bayard's court, was held the examination of Christian Weles, charged with threatening the life of his neighbor, D. J. Roberts. He was placed under $200 bonds to keep the peace.
The Editorial Association will be in the Dalles the morning of the 31 of July. We must give them a good time. That costs money, so to raise it everybody should do their part and go to the opera house and see "A Summer's Fancy."
The Regulator will make an extra trip to Stevenson tomorrow, when 3000 sheep will be taken down the river to the Washington side of the Cascade mountains. The old hull of the Dalles City will be towed and used in transporting them.
This morning the river stood at 21.5, a rise of eight inches since yesterday at the same time. Yesterday morning at Lewiston a rise of .4 was reported; at Riparia .6 and at Northport 1.1. This means a rise of about .6 for us, and by tomorrow night the river should be at a standstill.
Tomorrow being the tenth anniversary of the Epworth League, the day will be observed accordingly throughout the United States. The League in this city will, therefore, have charge of the evening service tomorrow night at the M. E. church. A good program has been prepared, and all are invited to be present.
Instead of the Baker being brought to The Dalles, as was intended, last evening the "Oklahoma" reached here about 5:20, with Capt. Allen in charge, and will remain until all danger of high water is over, or shall we say, the flood has left us high and dry. She was brought here by the O. R. & N. and is anchored near the company's yards.
Yesterday in our notice of the excursion of the "Sons of Herman" to our city on the 21st, we said that the Commercial Club band had been engaged. We are, however, informed that while the musicians will be composed mostly of members of that band, the music for the occasion will not be furnished by that band as an organization, some instruments being played by outsiders. They expect to be in good trim and furnish good music for our visitors.

In a letter received by Mr. MacAlister from Dr. Siddall, and written on the 4th at Skagway, he said he would start for Atlin City that afternoon by the Fan Tail route. On his trip over, doctor met on the steamer a lady who taught school in The Dalles in '78, Miss Ford, who made her home at that time with Mrs. Wingate. She is now Mrs. G. W. D'Luca, and her husband is editor of the Alaskan. She seemed pleased to meet some one from The Dalles, and made many inquiries concerning her friends here.
LIFE IN A RAILROAD CAMP.
A Dalles Boy Attempts to Correct a Jap and Gets Into Trouble
Work on the new Snake River line is progressing rapidly, and many contracts are nearing completion. The average contractor's life is not one in clover by any means, as one of the many incidents occurring almost daily might illustrate.
A young man, Chas. Snipes, well-known in The Dalles, who is foreman on a large work a few miles below Grange City, tried to discharge one of his Japanese, or propound more active principles as regards the use of the pick, into his oriental mind. The men demurred, and trouble arose with a pace equal to the rise of the Snake these days. Used to having his own way in such matters, Snipes acted promptly and without considering consequences. He floored the belligerent, and it was like poking a stick into a hornet's nest. A loud cry, and over a hundred Japs attacked him with picks, stones and shovels. Being unarmed, he was obliged to run. Down the grade to the river's edge, hotly pursued by the numerous emblems of Jap wrath, several of which took notable effect, he went, and thence to camp, while the head Jap held them back for the moment.
Later in the evening they all got together, however, and after a long pow-wow broke out afresh and came to Snipes' tent to renew the attack. By this time he was mad in earnest, and it is said wanted to fight the whole crowd. Events crowded, and authentic history of the next few hours is very much as that of the dark ages. However, he was finally persuaded to retire, and at about 11:30 appeared at the camp of Norman Seaman, who is also quite well known in The Dalles, in a violent rage and rain storm, and to his disgust learned that all of Seaman's men had been on a rampage from about the same cause for the past three days, and he was just holding the fort and waiting for the next card to turn up.
But in spite of this unpleasant situation there was no going further, for the night was dark and stormy and over a hundred Japs camped between him and the next white camp. So he doctored up his many cuts and bruises and remained until daylight, when rage having again mastered judgment, he armed and went back to face his old enemies at home, and try to get order out of a very ugly chaos.
That was the last report, but let us hope our friends have mastered the situation, which by the way appeared not to disturb their nerves as might of any ordinary citizen (not a contractor or railroad foreman) and that Japan is again at peace with the Snake river world.

"THE CORPSE AIN'T DEAD."
Neither Is It Likely to Be—And Our Neighbors Know It.
Despite the wars and rumors of wars which are being waged against The Dalles, and the excitement which comes just so often when some pessimist gets it into his head that our city is gradually dying, and is only walking around to save funeral expenses, back of it all there is a strong conviction that "the corpse ain't dead yet." nor is it liable to be, though at the same time they realize we might have been more fully awake to our opportunities. Thus the Dufur Dispatch under the heading "The Dalles Will Grow," aptly says:
"The Dalles was so long a trading point for such a large territory, and from its unequalled situation geographically it had to do so little to hold the trade, that the possibilities of ever losing any great portion seemed so distant as to hardly be worth consideration. Now the merchants at our county seat begin to realize their mistake and are showing an inclination to do something toward building up a manufacturing town."
"Though The Dalles might have been much greater than she is, still her natural advantages are such that a little enterprise among the business men will make it impossible for the Columbia Southern or any other railroad to kill or badly cripple the town."
"No city in the northwest is as favorably located as The Dalles and with any thing like business sense within five years she will face all the little shoe-string railroads that are claiming to be "town makers" to connect with The Dalles or go out of business."
F. A. McDonald for Governor.
In Thursday's edition of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer we find the following concerning a former Dalles man, and one who has now a host of friends here, who would be glad to see him honored by being elected governor of our sister state:
"Olympia saw the birth of the embryo McDonald boom for the governorship. At the Jefferson day banquet at Tacoma it was incubated and now Democrats all over the state are talking of him for the nomination. They are saying, too, that he has strong friends among the Populists who would support him in preference to any other Democrat for the office."
"Judge McDonald made a record at Olympia of which his friends are proud. He was unquestionably one of the brightest men in the legislature. His ready wit was often in evidence and as a debater on any question he was resourceful in argument and facile in expression."
