WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Repetition of "A Summer's Fancy" at the Vogt tonight.

Hear Wally sing "I'll Shake Up This Mean Old Town," tonight at the Vogt.

Portland at last has a mayor, Hon. W. A. Storey having been elected at a meeting of the council Tuesday night.

Hon. A. S. Blowers filed in the clerk's office today an addition to the town of Hood River to be known as Blowers Addition.

The winners of the Hosteller bowling trophy for the month ending May 15th were Mrs. J. S. Fish and Rosemary Baldwin, whose scores came out a tie.

Mr. Percy H. Levin will introduce a select dramatic specialty in the fourth act tonight, wherein he tells of an adventure had in the sunny land of Spain.

Some specialties will be introduced in the play tonight one of which will be an Irish character sketch by J. H. Hampshire. This alone should assure a good house.

It is gratifying to the friends of Mrs. W. E. Walther, who has been dangerously ill during the past week, to learn that she was much improved at the last reports.

A report was in circulation today that a man had been killed on Trout creek near Mitchell. A telephone message from Grass Valley, however, failed to confirm the rumor.

Max Vogt is having the wooden cornice removed from the Chapman block on Second street and placing corrugated iron in its stead, which greatly reduces his insurance on the building.

The great Pollman, king of ventriloquists, and professor of hypnotism and science, will appear at the Baldwin opera house on Thursday, May 18th. General admission 25 cents; children 15 cents.

Mrs. W. Tackman is prepared to fill all orders for cut flowers for Decoration Day or commencement exercises. She however, informs patrons that orders should be sent in as soon as possible to assure no disappointment.

Peter Johnson, who died of typhoid fever at St. Mary's hospital Monday last, was a resident of The Dalles. He was engaged in fishing this spring, working on an up-river seining ground, where he contracted his fatal illness.—Astorian.

Comini's goat will no doubt be in demand now, and be sought after so that he will be compelled to return to The Dalles. A late dispatch informs us that injections of lymphatic fluid of goats will make the aged return to youth's fair morning again, and perpetuate youth.

The river is still falling slightly. The D. P. & A. N. Co. feel duly thankful that the raise of last week did not continue at the same rate, for had it done so, the company would have been compelled to transfer at the portage by this time. It now lacks a twelve foot raise before that will be necessary.

One of the boys writing home from Manila says: "I think if the United States will give us each 160 acres of land and guarantee us the title, that one-half of the company will be settlers in these islands. We will defend the islands against invasion, because they are the most valuable part of any country that the United States ever obtained possession of."

There are just a few too many hobos and gentlemen of leisure in our city at present to make it very comfortable for ladies who are compelled to be on the streets at night. Every few days complaints are being made of ladies being molested by these insolent curs, one young lady who was on her way home at 8 o'clock last evening being frightened dreadfully. A stop should be put to such proceedings if violent means have to be used.

Again we call attention to the lecture to be delivered by Professor Lyman, of Whitman College tomorrow (Friday) evening at the Congregational church, at 8 o'clock. His subject will be "Benjamin Franklin, the Typical American Statesman," and as Prof. Lyman is said to be a most pleasing and instructive speaker, many will certainly improve the invitation given by the Taine class to hear him. No admission will be charged.

It had almost been decided by the cast of "A Summer's Fancy" not to give a repetition of the play tonight; but during the performance Mr. Levin received a written request from the audience to announce a repetition, and after other similar requests the announcement was made. It is to be hoped they will play to a packed house tonight as the prices have been placed at 15 cents for children; 35 cents general admission, and 50 cents reserved seats.

This year's encampment of the re-organized Oregon National Guard will be held at the state fair grounds in Salem about July 10th. Brigadier-General Beebe and Adjutant-General Tuttle have made arrangements with the state board of agriculture for the use of the grounds, after a careful examination of the facilities found there for handling a large body of men, which are believed to be the best in the state. Ten companies of infantry and one battery will participate in the encampment, which will last ten days.

"It never rains, but it pours" would be applicable to the situation in The Dalles as regards entertainments. For the next month we are to have any amount of traveling shows, interspersed with numberless home affairs. Beside the circus which will pitch its tent here on the 10th of next month, the bill boards are today covered with posters announcing the appearance of Norris Bros.' Equine and Canine Carnival. The Portland papers have been speaking very favorably of this show, and it is no doubt a good one.

We are always pleased to note the progress being made by Dalles boys, and to find that they are filling positions of trust in various places where their lots have been cast. A private letter received from Ray Logan yesterday tells of his appointment as house surgeon at St. Vincent's hospital in Portland. Ray has for some time been a student in the medical department of the university of Oregon, and it is encouraging to those interested in him to find that he is making the most of his opportunities.

A letter from Dr. Siddall tells of his arrival at Log Cabin, on the dividing line between the British and American possessions, where are about fifty houses, mostly made of cloth. He says the trip over the railroad is perfectly grand. Knowing that the doctor was from The Dalles and might get lonesome without a fire, Skagway got up one for his special benefit the night before he left. Seven buildings burned and the loss was about $17,000. Being in the night it succeeded in unfitting him for his long trip if nothing else.

Our attention was today called to a case of actual want in our city. It is that of a woman with three children—two boys and a girl—who came here from the Sound expecting to receive word and assistance from a brother in Montana. Being disappointed in that regard she is now in need of help from some source. They are stopping at the Cosmopolitan Hotel and we understand seem to have nothing to eat but potatoes, and very few of them. Here is an opportunity for Dalles people to dispense their charity, which has always been forthcoming whenever the needy were found.

"A SUMMER'S FANCY."

Put on the Boards by Home Talent in a Pleasing Manner.

It has been several years since the home talent of The Dalles has given a play in our city and since that time different members of the club have moved away and such changes have been made that it was with hesitancy that those who are left again decided to appear on the stage. However, the visit of Mr. P. H. Levin and the proposition made by him to instruct them in a light play at a small per cent of the proceeds, the remainder to be used for the entertainment of the editors on their visit here, induced them again to make the venture.

With just a week for rehearsals and as most of the cast were busy people, it was a task to accomplish it in so short a time. Besides there were several in the cast who had never taken part in such a performance before.

However, the audience was much surprised at the success attained, and seemed more than delighted with the performance. There was just a little surprise on the part of those on the stage, too. Having on all previous occasions been greeted by such large audiences, who fully appreciated the efforts of the participants, the fact that the hall was not filled disappointed them somewhat. Nevertheless so enthusiastic were the people there that the lack in numbers was made up in the applause given.

"A Summer's Fancy" is a very pretty little play, full of pleasing situations and with just enough of wit and pathos to make the needed variety. The stage settings were also such as to add much to its production, the reception scene being particularly pleasing.

Mr. Levin's efforts to make the play successful were untiring and to accomplish so much in the little time given, required much diligence on his part. But so well was it done that not one detail was lacking. Being a splendid actor himself he understands just how to assist others, and displays a cheerful disposition which encourages his cast. At the same time he performed his part perfectly. As "Jack Henderson, the lover of "Mercy" he was fearless and showed a thorough acquaintance with the stage. Mr. Levin made many friends in the audience.

Will Frank as "Professor Potts" took that difficult role so well as to surprise his friends who knew he was good in minstrelsy, but had never seen him in the drama. Will made a hit, and caused much merriment, manipulating his long coat tail in a manner which delighted all, especially the small boys.

"Jethro Baxter," the old hayseed, was taken by Harry Lonsdale, who was thoroughly suited to the Yankee farmer. His dialect was good and his acting better, if possible. He fairly brought down the house when on entering the parlor he first sampled the refreshments bearing A. M. Williams' colors and then decided Mays & Crowe's was the only fit drink, and so literally filled himself. Harry's preference was only natural.

Will Crossen proved his versatility by assuming two roles. As "Jake," the country boy, he was immense; and as "Wally," the society chap, he met every requirement of the part. Will is so perfectly at home on the stage that he puts everyone in the audience at ease. If he can't say one thing he will another, and always comes out on top. His song was very catchy, and took well.

Last night was Ernest Knedeman's first appearance on the stage, and, having been assigned the difficult part of a lover, it took much persuasion to induce him to take it. But he finally consented, and all are pleased that he did, for he not only filled his role so well as to capture "Edith," but the audience as well.

Mrs. Blakeley always charms everyone when she steps on the stage. So charming is her appearance and so loving her manner, that all are drawn to her. Her pleading with her son to give up the repugnant alliance he was about to make was very touching, and her denunciation just as pronounced.

Although not assuming a character which gave her an opportunity to display the wonderful histrionic talent she possesses, Mrs. Eddon, as the "maiden of uncertain age," could not help showing her adaptability to the stage and made much of the part. Her costumes were stunning.

The part of "Edith Henderson," by Miss Myrtle Michell, was very well taken. She seemed to thoroughly understand what the role required, and acted with perfect ease and grace.

"Mercy," the little unsophisticated country girl, was taken by Miss Rose Michell. The character was somewhat difficult for an amateur; but she did her best to fill it, and angels (much less newspaper reporters) could do nothing more.

The solos by Will Frank and Miss Myrtle Michell added much to the success of the play, the richness of the former's voice showing off to good effect, while the latter was perhaps never in better voice.

It is not saying too much to add that the play was a success, as was attested by the request of the audience to have it repeated.

Dad's Old Britches.

A small boy who is a close observer, and somewhat of a poet, gives the family history of his father's pants as follows:

"When dad has worn his britches out, they pass to brother John, then ma she trims them round about and William put them on. When William's legs to long have grown and the trousers fail to hide 'em, then Walter claims them for his own and hides himself inside 'em; next Sam's legs they close invest, and when they won't stretch tighter, they're turned and shortened up for me—the writer. Ma works them into caps and rags, when I have burst the stitches. At doomsday we, perhaps, shall see the list of dad's old britches."
