REGARDING FOREST RESERVE.

The scientist who wants the sheep kept off of the Cascade forest reserve for fear that they would eat the moss, is, of course, a Californian. If he should stay in Oregon a while he would find that moss is here indigenous, exotic and spontaneous. It is both an independent grass and a fungus. It grows in water, on dry soil and on trees, and on the backs of some people.

There is a good deal of foolishness about the Cascade timber reserve. There is more of it than is necessary. Pasturing sheep on it is not going to do the trees or the underbrush or the moss any harm. Recently the department at Washington ordered the cruisers to be sent into the reserve immediately, to keep down fires! If they were to be sent in now, relief parties would have to be sent in after them soon, to rescue them. The snow over a large part of the reserve is from ten to forty feet deep. One of the orders once given to the cruisers from Washington was to cut trails ten or twenty feet wide, to prevent the spread of fires! It would take some of the cruisers a thousand years to cut the proper trails in their district, and then it would not stop a fire in the timber, once it got started.—Salem Statesman.

One of the peace commissioners sent from the rebel camp to confer with General Otis said he had been studying the constitution of the United States and he liked it. He had made up his mind that he wanted one just like it for his country. He may be likened to the baby that cries for the pretty moon. A constitution like the United States constitution would do the Filipinos no good. They would not know how to administer the laws or conduct themselves under it. Most of them would not know it from a plate of baked beans. It will require several generations of training, under strict rules well enforced, to bring the people of that country up to the point where the constitution of the United States will do them any good. But they will come to it, for they will have that sort of training.

More than half the agricultural implements imported by Australia are made in the United States. In this line of industry American inventors and mechanics are unapproached.

When the next Tagal envoy arrives with a flag of truce and a treatise on the constitution of the United States, it would be well to transact whatever business is necessary at the picket line.
