WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Say, when is a volunteer not a volunteer? When he's shot. No. Well, when he's mustered.

The ladies of the Christian church will give a program and ice cream social next Friday evening at the church.

Last night Deputy Sheriff Sexton arrested Frank Crane, of this city, who is wanted in Crook county on a charge of larceny from a dwelling. He is now a boarder at the county jail.

Children's day services at the Liberty school house last Sunday were well attended by the members and friends of Sunday school. The offering by the children was $2.70, and will be applied to the missionary fund.

Julius Fisher, who was formerly in this city, employed at the Elite barber shop, has opened a first-class barber shop in the Hotel Perkins at Portland, where Dalles people will always be glad to find him when visiting there.

A dispatch from the officers at Sumpster summoned Sheriff Kelly to that place last night. One Genterman, a tombstone dealer, who obtained money from Chas. Frank, of this city, on a bogus check six weeks ago, having been apprehended at that place.

James Fisher, who has been employed in the grocery store of M. T. Nolan, and formerly with A. L. Newman, has accepted a position with the Wasco warehouse company. Mr. Fisher is a young man who will succeed at whatever he undertakes, being steady and industrious.

Rev. De Forest must have ordered weather for the occasion, for no better picnic weather could be imagined than that of today, when about seventy of the Episcopal Sunday school members and a few friends boarded the Regulator for an outing at Hood River. No doubt they have spent a most delightful day.

The town is full of country people today, and all look smiling and report crops and everything else the brightest. The rain of Saturday and Sunday was very general in the interior and came in good play. The only crops that are the least phased are those nearer the river, which have been burned slightly. The storm came a little too late to benefit them.

M. K. Thompson, who was arrested charged with assault and battery, demanded a jury trial and his case was continued from yesterday afternoon until 9 o'clock this morning, when N. H. Gates appeared for the plaintiff and A. A. Jayne for the defense. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty as charged and Justice Bayard fined him $15 or seven days in jail. In default of payment he now languisheth.

From Thos. Balfour, who came up from Lyle last evening, we learn that a man who was engaged in driving logs for Rowe yesterday at the mouth of Klickitat, fell between the logs and was drowned. The body has not as yet been recovered. The river is now a raging torrent, the recent rains making it worse than formerly. However, during the forty-mile drive which they have already made, not an accident has occurred before.

From a friend in Portland who attended the Mays-Ainsworth wedding we learn that the Oregonian failed to mention one of the prettiest features of the wedding, and that two of our sweetest Dalles "young ladies" were forgotten. The little twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Thompson, Edna and Lois, acted as flower girls, and attracted in light blue silk gowns, made a very pretty picture as they carried baskets of the sweetest flowers with which to strew the path of the bridal party.

Last night about 9:30 o'clock, Pearl, the 6-year-old daughter of R. G. D. Wilson, died at the home of Mrs. F. W. McCune, on Seventh and Union street. Her father being in this city working for Hugh Glenn, Pearl came up from her home at Sprague about two weeks ago on a visit. She was taken ill two days since with what was supposed to be typhoid fever, but which terminated very suddenly in her death. The remains will be taken to Sprague tomorrow for burial by the side of her mother, who died last summer.

Those who have a good cherry crop this year may consider themselves fortunate, for Royal Anns are demanding an exceptionally good price, due perhaps to their scarcity. The crop in the Valley having failed, the commission merchants from Portland are coming up into Eastern Oregon and buying up the entire crop from different orchards. While large Royal Anns last year were sold for three cents, this year the fruit men are getting four and a half cents for the best. Where there is a full crop the fruit is smaller than usual; but those who have but a half crop can show some of the largest and best cherries we have ever seen.

A meeting of the members of the public library was held at the library room last night for the purpose of revising the charter. Among other things, it was arranged that any who are members of the library, that is, by paying 25 cents a month are entitled to its privileges, are also entitled to vote on any question which may come up in connection therewith. The ladies realized about $100 from the minstrel performance, a portion of which will be used in supplying new books, and thirty-five volumes will be added at once. This is a splendid opportunity to procure the latest reading, and many new members should be taken in.

We have always yielded the palm to Hood River when it comes to the strawberry question, but this year Hood River berries are not in it with our Mill creek berries. Being accustomed to inquiring for their celebrated berries, Dalles people made this year no exception until they discovered that this year's crop was an off one and they were not only small, but sour. We turned then to our product, and henceforth there'll be no need of persuading people that ours are the best, for any who have tasted of the luscious strawberries which are being brought to market by our own farmers, will never be induced to ask for any other.

Although being absent from The Dalles for ten years, Miss Alice Duffy, who taught in our public schools, has a very large circle of friends here, who are interested concerning her welfare. About two years ago they were much grieved to hear that her favorite brother, Henry, had been murdered by burglars who entered the store where he slept. Another deep sorrow has come to her during the past week, when her older brother, James, was killed by the train when on an excursion from his home in Waukon to Burlington, Vt., where the national convention of Foresters was to be held. Stepping off at a way station to speak to friends, he attempted to board the train after it had started and fell under the wheels, receiving injuries from which he died the next evening.

The party, consisting of Messrs. Siefert, Moore, Fish, Gorman and Van Anda, who made a trip to Dog river, where the city's water ditches are supplied, examined the city ditches and those of the Lumbering company. Among other things they found the former ditches broken in two places and much of them filled with timber and logs, which greatly reduced the supply of water, and is in need of repairs. A meeting of the water commission will be held the latter part of the month, when a report will be made and plans arranged for increasing our supply. They report the road to the Meadows in bad condition, and after the road to the mill was left, it was necessary to "saw wood" or give up the chase. The grass in the meadows is in fine condition and the few cattle which are grazing therein have what might be called a "puddin'." Summer campers and those who live in the cabins there have not as yet made their appearance.

Learned Something About Our State.

Last week the members of the Taine class were very pleasantly entertained at the home of the Misses Roberts, on Dry Hollow, and having had such a delightful evening they were doubly pleased to be again invited to spend a few hours at the residence of Miss Melissa Hill, in the same neighborhood, last evening.

For some months past they have taken up the history of Oregon, and so the hostess chose well when she prepared a guessing game which would refresh their memories on some of the minor points regarding our own state, as well as those more important. The guests were called upon to name the oldest city, who settled it and why it was so named, and many heard for the first time that the first potatoes ever grown in Oregon were raised at Astoria from twelve spuds which the settlers had succeeded in preserving sufficiently on their trip around the Horn to make them grow. Then, too, others were not aware that Astoria was first named Fort George, that Walla Walla was called Nez Perce, and that Astoria and Eugene are now vying as to which has the oldest court house in the state. And so while the guessing was enjoyable it was also profitable. Then five-minute conversations took place and lighter subjects were discussed until the hostesses brought in refreshments of ice cream, cake and fruits.

The ride home by moonlight was very enjoyable, for nowhere does the moon show to better advantage than from the Dry Hollow hills.

N. E. A. Excursion.

The following communication from J. H. Ackerman has been received and will no doubt be of interest to those who are contemplating taking the trip with the N. E. A.:

SALEM, Or., June, 1899.

TO OREGON TEACHERS:—In answer to many inquiries, will say that excursions for the national Educational Association will leave Portland, as follows: "Shasta Route" via Southern Pacific, July 7. By ocean steamers, July 1, and July 6. I have been assured that there will be enough going on the Southern Pacific to enable all who wish to go to secure the $35 rate; and, also, enough will go by water to secure the $30 rate.

For information relative to routes, etc., confer with local ticket agents of the Southern Pacific, and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company.

Oregon headquarters have been secured at the Hotel Rosslyn, Los Angeles, where all from Oregon are requested to register and make themselves at home.

These rates may be secured by any one, no matter whether they are teachers or not, and include the $2 membership fee.

J. H. ACKERMAN,
State Director and Manager.

TERRIFIC STORM AT SPOKANE

Lightning Plays Havoc and Causes $10,000 Damage.

A few minutes before 5 o'clock Sunday morning the most violent thunderstorm in the recollection of the oldest residents of Spokane, and the first to be experienced in that part of the country in a number of years, struck the city. In one terrific bolt that woke almost the whole town, it tore out the front of one house, coming perilously near taking the life of a woman and her child; set afire the pumping station at Natatorium park, which subsequently burned to the ground, and scorched a corner of the Electric hotel. A fierce rain of short duration followed the thunder storm, and in five minutes the gutters were miniature creeks.

The terrific thunderclap also awoke Mrs. Frank E. Hutton of No. 1732 Gardner avenue, and her young son, with the bewildered impression that something dreadful had happened, and that they had been hurled downward through two floors into the cellar.

This is not exactly what had happened; something more miraculous than that. And the strangest phase of the wild occurrence is that neither mother nor son was injured, beyond a bad shaking up of the nerves.

The room was in frightful confusion. Furniture was overturned, pictures on the walls were awry, and the bed in which Mrs. Hutton and her son had been asleep was in fractured pieces, strewn about the floor. The feather bed on which Mrs. Hutton and her son had lain in slumber, occupied its relative position in the room, but instead of resting in a respectable and dignified position on its bed slats, it lay stretched out on the floor.

The Huttons rubbed their eyes and gasped. And they shivered, too, for the cold night wind was blowing gusts of driving rain into the room through a gaping hole where the gabled front of the house had been.

The lightning had struck the front of the one and one-half story house, just above the first-story line, and had torn away the clapboards and plastering, leaving the bedchamber exposed to view from the street.

The same lightning stroke had torn asunder the bed in which Mrs. Hutton and her boy had been sleeping, leaving the mattress and the sleepers on the floor, without so much as injuring a hair of their heads.

The total loss to the Natatorium buildings, it is estimated, will reach to between $7000 and $8000.

Lost.

Between the First National bank and the residence of J. S. Schenck, on Saturday afternoon, a watch fob; design, a Masonic emblem—a gold eagle. Liberal reward will be given to the finder who returns the same to the bank. 26 3c
