WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

September patterns now on sale at Pease & Mays.

The right party can secure steady employment by applying at the Singer sewing machine office in this city, on Second street, near Union. aug 9 3t

Some men are so sympathetic that they are willing to share your last dollar with you.

When a debtor puts on airs and the creditor gets wind of it, they sometimes come to blows.

Frank LaRose was arrested yesterday afternoon for being drunk, and this morning forfeited his watch as payment of a $5 fine.

Hon. John Sommerville has secured the Bennett cottage on Fourth street, and Mrs. H. E. Mitchell is now in the city superintending fitting it up, preparatory to their moving in from Hay Creek.

A letter received by friends from Mrs. Nellie Murchie tells that after the burning of their grocery store in Lewiston, they moved to North Yakima, where Mr. Murchie is again engaged in the livery business.

Look at this. $400.00 will buy a good six room house, a good barn and two fine lots, situated in the west end of Eleventh street. Owner will take $150.00 and the balance in one year. See Dad Butts.

The Oregonian says that First Lieut. Malcolm S. Jameson, who is well known in The Dalles, will after a visit to his mother and sister in New York, take charge of his desk at the Hotel Portland. Mr. Jameson left Sunday and will return to Portland about the 25th.

Perhaps never before in the history of Montana was there so much work to be done with so few laborers to do it, says the Helena Independent. The employment agencies report a greater demand for men than they have known for years. From every part of the state come inquiries for workmen. No able bodied man who wants to work needs to look around long for a job.

The Christian church will give an ice-cream social next Friday evening at 8 o'clock. One special feature of the entertainment will be talks by the soldier boys. A question box will be at the door, the soldiers will answer the questions. Admission 15 cents. The program will be rendered in the auditorium of the church and the refreshments will be served in the basement.

The ordinance against cows running at large is being enforced strictly, as one of our dairymen discovered this morning. One of his cows had been put in the pound when found running about the city, and he proceeded to that place and took the animal out. He was then arrested and compelled not only to pay the $1 for the release of the cow, but the costs of his arrest.

Some one must have got "shot" the night the boys came home and fallen against Harry Liebe's plate-glass show window from the appearance. In one corner is a crack which looks as if something had been thrown or fallen against it. 'Tis lucky for Harry the fall was a light one, for no clew as to the cause of it has been obtained and had it been but a little worse, must have necessitated putting in a new glass.

And now those who were compelled to remain at home from the seaside and camping places are congratulating themselves that they "had the good taste" to stay at home, while those who are paying $14 a week board at the seaside are getting a bath without going in the ocean, and paying dear for it. The hotel keepers at these resorts are "sick of livin'," and are at outs with the elements, for although we will surely have another seige of hot weather, it cannot last long enough to justify guests remaining during the rainy season.

Those who have traveled on the buffet-library car which was placed on trains No. 1 and 2 between Chicago and Portland on the 10th, say they are "beauts." Among the conveniences in the smoking saloon is a writing desk and writing material, with the O. R. & N. stamp upon it. The postal cards are especially novel, having printed thereon five small views along the Columbia river. These make splendid souvenirs, and are just the thing a tourist would wish to send back to friends in the East. If Oregon is not advertised it is not the fault of its transportation companies.

A year ago today the Mays & Crowe block and that on the opposite side of the street were in ashes, presenting an appearance that would dishearten the most sanguine and cause them to predict anything rather than that the desolate place should be transformed as it is today. About midnight on the night of the 14th the fire started and in the space of a few hours the splendid hardware store of Mays & Crowe and all surrounding buildings for more than a block were laid low. Scarcely can one realize that but a short year has passed since the conflagration, when upon looking around they view one of the finest, (if not the finest) hardware store on the coast, and all about it good buildings, making it the center of the business portion of the city. This is but another proof of the aggressiveness of some of our business men and the Phoenix-like proclivity of The Dalles.

Will We Continue Patriotic?

EDITOR CHRONICLE:

The people of The Dalles have shown by the hearty welcome extended to our soldier boys that a genuine feeling of true patriotism has hold of them.

Now after the greeting is over, let not that feeling wane, but by those little acts that go to make up great ones, show that the feeling is deeper than simply an excited greeting.

Can we not find a place here and there, where work can be found for willing hands?

When the uniform is laid off let us still recognize them as our soldier boys, "Oregon's pride." While we should do this with our own boys, that duty extends farther.

There is a young "Rough Rider," so 'tis said, within our midst, with a broken constitution, trying to earn an honest living by conducting a restaurant down in the East End adjoining Farley's harness shop. Why shouldn't we drop in and take a meal with him, and encourage his efforts. L.

Facts Concerning Our Dead Heroes-- Contributed by Capt. H. Wells.

The following facts about the members of Company L, "who are now under the sod and the dew," have been supplied by the company commander:

First Sergeant Lee K. Morse was shot and killed Jan. 6, 1899, about 11 o'clock at night, on the wall at Manila, by a sentinel who mistook him for a prowling native for whom Morse himself was searching. He had been first lieutenant of Company K, at Portland, but was not in the service when the war broke out. He came to Portland from Eastern Oregon and enlisted when he found he could not get a commission. His body was taken to Portland, where his parents live, by his brother, also a member of the company, and was then conveyed to Michigan for burial.

Private William Field enlisted from Company G, of The Dalles. He was at Camp McKinley detailed to the commissary department under Lieut. Platt. At Cavite in July, 1898, he was detailed to the regimental hospital, and in August was transferred from the volunteer service to the United States Hospital Corps, and when the regiment went to Manila he remained at the hospital in Cavite. He soon after contracted typhoid fever and died Sept. 5th. The company went over to Cavite in a body to attend his funeral. He was buried on the marine hospital grounds and the boys erected a good headstone at their own expense. It can be said of Field that his sickness was largely due to his neglect of himself while caring for others. He has a mother and a young brother and sister at Centaur, Mo., to whom his effects were sent, and a father at Portland.

Henry O'Flaherty enlisted with Company C men. His father lives near Vancouver, Wash. He was an extremely generous and kind-hearted boy, and much of the time was given charge of the feeding of the sick men of the company, whom he never neglected. He was in the hospital several times with measles and fever, and contracted small-pox at a time when all his vitality had been exhausted by fever. He died March 9, 1899, and was buried at Manila.

Guy Millard had been a member of Company K a number of years, and came back again when the war broke out. He was shot in the breast during the charge at Malabon. Some of the boys helped him a little way to the rear. When the hospital corps found him he was trying to aid another wounded man, who was by no means so badly hurt as himself. He died before they could get him to the field hospital. He was buried on Artillery Knoll, near Manila. His mother, Mrs. Hislop, lives in Portland.

Hayes B. Taylor enlisted in Company K a short time before the war. His mother, sister and brother live in Jacksonville, Or. He was killed far to the front on the Malabon pike, dying a few minutes after being shot in the breast. He was tenderly cared for by his comrades, though all under fire, and made as comfortable as possible. It was necessary to leave the body on the field till morning, when it was recovered and sent to Manila and buried on Artillery Knoll.

Lieut. V. Strawderman enlisted in Company C just before it went to Portland. He was from Machias, W. Va., where a brother and a sister are living. He was shot and instantly killed during one of the rushes up the Malabon pike. His body, also, had to be left on the field till morning. He is buried on Artillery knoll.

Charles R. Rubart also enlisted at The Dalles, coming out to Manila with the recruit battalion. His people live at Beaverley, Illinois. He was shot in the thigh in front of the trenches at Malabon. His wound was bound up and he was taken to the field hospital at Calococan station and sent by train to Manila. He died while waiting his turn at the hospital to be operated upon. He was buried on Artillery knoll.

It is the intention of the war department to send home the bodies of all deceased soldiers as soon as practicable. Early in the spring 300 caskets were sent to Manila, accompanied by a professional undertaker, but it was discovered that climatic conditions rendered it impossible to embalm bodies unless it was done immediately after death, so the matter has been postponed until such a time as the bodies can be safely taken up after burial, probably six months hence.

Relations will be officially notified when this is done, and the bodies will be sent them free of expense if they desire. Otherwise they will be interred in a national cemetery. On last decoration day, only a few days before the regiment left for home, the graves of all the dead of company L were profusely decorated with flowers by their comrades.

Some May Lose Their Jobs.

A Portland railroad man, who has for many years been connected with the passenger department of the O. R. & N. Co., is authority for the statement that utter demoralization exists among the employees of the different Union Pacific feeders and connections in that city. The Union Pacific is about to obtain control of the Oregon Short Line and O. R. & N., which, through a part of the system, have heretofore been operated under independent management.

All these lines maintain general passenger, freight, ticket and traveling agents besides a large force of clerks in their Portland offices. The result of the consolidation of interests will merge the whole of each department of the several roads into one general department, which is sure to result in the sacrifice of no less than 40 or 50 positions by the employees who have heretofore held their positions under the independent managements.—Spokesman Review.

Lieutenant Teifer Selected Census Supervisor.

Those who met Lieut. Teifer during his visit here Sunday will be gratified to learn that word has been received from M. A. Mody to the effect that the Oregon delegation this morning selected him as census supervisor for the second congressional district. This has been a position much sought after, and Lieut. Teifer has been honored in the selection, which was no doubt given on account of efficient service as an officer during the late war, and also from a personal knowledge of his business career before he enlisted. For some time he was a traveling man, then held the position as manager for Lewis & Dryden, in Portland. He is a native of Buffalo, N. Y., but for years has made his home in Portland.

Lieut. Teifer is a favorite with the boys of Company L, and everyone who met him here was pleased with his genial manner. His splendid tribute to our soldier boys, if nothing else, would endear him to the hearts of Dalles people, who congratulate him on the appointment.
