MR. ROOT TAKING HOLD.

"The new secretary of war, Mr. Elihu Root, has taken hold of the work of his office in a quiet but thorough way, which promises well for his success in administering it. He makes no promises, and no boasts, but is getting familiar with the facts and the evidence, as he would with those of a case he had to try in court, and as soon as he has mastered them he will go ahead in a manner which, we are confident, will satisfy the nation.

"In spite of a widespread belief to the contrary, the training of a good lawyer is the best possible preparation for the duties of an executive office. The mere fact that lawyers are so often called upon to undertake these duties, is of itself a conclusive argument in favor of their fitness for them. Ignorant demagogues may declaim as much as they please against the preponderance in the government of men of the legal profession, but if their objections were justified the people would have long ago found it out. That so many lawyers are sent to legislatures and to congress, and are elected as mayors, governors and even presidents, proves that experience in practicing law does not disqualify, at least, men of public service in these capacities.

"Successful lawyers, more than men in any other calling, are required to possess a general knowledge of things.

"We repeat that a well-trained and well-informed lawyer like Elihu Root, is the best possible material out of which to make an executive officer, and we shall be greatly disappointed if Mr. Root does not confirm our opinion."

The above is a portion of an editorial article in the New York Sun.

The news coming from Washington every day of the manner in which Mr. Root is taking hold of things, goes to justify the estimate of his abilities and the value of his training, and the prediction of a successful administration of his great trust. While he is feeling his ground carefully, Mr. Root is pushing things all along the line with an evident determination to make a record of efficiency for his administration, and of glory for his country.

INDUSTRIAL GROWTH.

The industries of the country are growing as rapidly now as at any previous period of the history of the country, and the census returns next year will show the advancement during the decade has been quite remarkable, in spite of the fact that the country had a panic year and several years of recovery after that panic. The population has increased about 23 per cent in the last nine years, and according to figures of the bureau of statistics there has been an average growth of 42 per cent in the output of six important industries.

Comparing the figures of the first six months of 1899 with those of the first six months of 1890 it appears that there has been an increase of 46 per cent in the quantity of iron used, an increase of 42 per cent in the amount of cotton manufactured, an increase of 25 per cent in the woolen goods output, an increase of 28 per cent in the boots and shoes shipped by factories, an increase of 63 per cent in imports of raw rubber. The average gain for each of these industries is 42 per cent, which is almost twice as great as the increase in population. There was more or less activity at the first of the decade, but the greatest improvement has been recorded during the past few years, and that improvement ought to continue, if men have learned any lessons from the trials they have encountered and an entirely new phase of the situation is not presented by the operation of the combinations of capital.
