SUPPRESS "SOLDIER GIRL."

Who will suppress the "Soldier Girl?" Who will tell her that she is not wanted on the transports; that she has become a brazen evidence of female degeneracy and a general all-around nuisance, says the S. F. Bulletin.

What is the "Soldier Girl?" Not the sweet, modest, charitably inclined woman who visits the inbound ships loaded with brave boys in blue with the idea of administering to the sick, saying a few kind words to the war-weary volunteers and conveying messages to the men from relatives and sweethearts! The soldier girl is a loud-mouthed female of the I want to meet some brass-buttons stripe, who listens for the sound of the siren, rushes to the nearest tugboat station and calmly presents herself to the captain with the declaration that "she has a friend on board the transport."

Not one soldier girl out of twenty has a friend on the transport, or knows so much as the name of the cabin mess boy or the regimental mascot. She isn't going off to the ship to soothe the fevered brow of some poor sick private or to say a few words of encouragement to the returning regular who wears no shoulder strap. She is simply looking for an opportunity to force her cheeky self on some officer and get acquainted with him in spite of himself, so that she may be able to go ashore and gush over the number of lieutenants and captains she has met.

The soldier girl has no particular choice of officers. She is willing to be introduced to anything that has legs, arms, a head, and wears a sword. Not satisfied with one expedition to the "inbound steamer," she bobs up serenely every time a vessel with troops aboard is sighted, and then goes through the same disgusting exhibition of lack of femininity that characterizes her peculiar class. No one on the tug is a greater bother, and no one is more of the opinion that the steam craft in question was sent out for especial purpose of allowing just such females as herself a chance to make fools of themselves. She pouts and stamps when people with business to attend to requests speedy communication with the ship and a quick return to the shore. Miss Buttons wants to break in upon the sanctity of the meeting of an officer with his friends or family to "make dates" or beg a piece of blue cloth, or any old thing as a souvenir of the campaign in the Philippines. Everything must stop short when the soldier girl comes, and the military discipline of the regiments should be relaxed when this burdensome combination of silk skirts and human gall blanches in view.

The soldier girl is never intelligent.

As a usual thing she does not know when she is not wanted, and it is doubtful if she did become aware of the fact whether she could be persuaded that her presence was undesirable from a purely unselfish point of view. She is, in nine cases out of ten, a washed-out blonde with a face devoid of any expression save that of intense excitement on seeing a couple of yards of blue cloth made up into trousers and a coat. If you desire to make her very "tired," to use her own term, ask her what she thinks of the world in general outside of military circles, and she will regard you as an intolerable, wearisome man, or woman, "who hasn't any sense." A joke wouldn't penetrate her unless blown into her with a Springfield bullet, or shot at her from a Hotchkiss. She is as dense as a Point Bonita fogbank, and she hasn't an idea above a pair of epauletts.
