Portland Chamber of Commerce Pledge

Their Support.

Ti e stockmen of Oregon will have the support of the Portland Chamber of Commerce in their effort to hold the Cascade forest reserve for grazing purposes. Support was pledged at a meeting of the trustees Tuesday morning. A committee of the Oregon Woolgrowers' Association, headed by J. N. Williamson of Prineville, conferred with the trustees and convinced them that grazing in the reserve would not be injurious to tree life, would not decrease the water supply, and that the danger of fire resulting from the pasturage of stock in the reserve is too small to be considered. Other members of the committee were: Geo. A. Young, of The Dalles, president of the Oregon Woolgrowers' Association ; A. A. Bonney, of Tygh Valley; D. M. F.ench and Judge Robert Maye, of The Dalles; Ex Governor Z. F. Moody, Hon. John Minto, of Salem ; State Dairy Commission J. W. Bailey and Dr. James Withycombe, of the Oregon Agricultural college, attended at the request of the association. Trustees of the Chamber of Commerce present were : Geo. Taylor, Livingston and Geo. Lawrence. No order excluding stockmen from the Cascade reserve has been issued. Stockmen having been ordered out of the Rainier reserve, in Washington, it is believed that an order closing the Cascade reserve will not be long in forthcoming. For this reason Oregon woolgrowers decided to begin a campaign against the issuance of the order, rather than one for the revocation of the order after it had been issued.

In his speech before the meeting Mr. Minto said :

"About 300,000 sheep are summered on the eastern slope of the Cascade mountains near the desert. That desert is inhabitable only because of the range down from Bickelton yesterday, and facilities afforded to the inhabitants. and the whole family of the peon is left on the boat this morning for Port- The eastern slope of the Cascades is set to work on it, the most primitive

AMERICAN OPAL MINES.

Veins in This Country and in Mexico It is Said lieve Become Exhnusted.

The opal mines in Mexico and in the United States have been about exhausted, no opals of much value being found. At one time large sums were made out been found at many places both in Mexico and the United States.

Opals occur in veins, in exactly the same manner as silver or gold. They are a species of silicate infused with a large percentage of water, which gives them their magnificent coloring; the iridescence is really a rainbow of fect and the colors are caused by a prismatic refraction of the light rays The reds, blues and yellows occur in the regular rainbow order and as you turn it the miniature rainbows chase each other around the interior of the stone.

Opals coming from below the level of the water in a mine are not desizable. They may lose their color or crack after being exposed to the sunlight. As soon as a mine reaches water level it is abandoned. These abandoned mines are the base of operations of the fakirs, for the most part Mexicans who cut the opals found in them and peddle them to the unwary, mostly ton, ists. Owing to the great percentage of water these stones are remarkably brilliant and sell readily. In order to retain their brilliancy and prevent racking the fakirs carry them in their mouths.

The mine owner rarely cuts his own gems. Skilled labor is too expensive Peon labor at a much less cost is employed. Families of stone cutters who have been in the business for generations live near the mines. They achee pieces of material out of the mine and buy it at the best bargain they can obtain. The nurchase is taken how more valuable for grazing than for tim- sort of instruments being used, most Eigin Parrott, a former resident of The ber. It is valueless so far as timber is of the work being done by hand. His work completed, the cutter sells the stone back to the mine owner and the profit is his wages. The buyer for the mine owner must be a man of great patience, for the peons are persistent hagglers in trading. The whole batch has a 5-per-cent interest in the sale of is invariably bought, although there all government land sold within her may be in the lot only one desirable stone, for if you select that one the peon will ask more for it than he would for the bunch. In this way a large number of almost valueirss stones come into the possession of the mine owner, which accounts for the small prices of many so-called opals. Many of these are disposed of by the mine owners at three dollars a hundred .- N. Y. Sun.
