An acetylene gas plant in use in the Odd Fellows hall, Lafayette, exploded while the Rebekah lodge was in session. The plant was wrecked, but no other damage was done.

The Metropolitans arrived on No. 1 this afternoon—thirty-five in number. Judging from the box sheet, they will be greeted by a much better house than enjoyed "Mascot" upon their last visit.

Anyone might know the Washington's are on their way home by the patriotic feeling which prevades Walla Walla. The Union tells us that a few snow "flakes" fell last Thursday. That's all right, we understand.

Dr. Russ, one of Portland's prominent dentists, has bought Dr. Tackman's office, in the Vogt building. His work is first-class and prices reasonable. Gold tooth crowns and bridge work a specialty. Teeth filled and extracted painless. 12

Many Dallesites will remember J. M. Buschke, a former resident of our city, and captain of the militia company here. Well, the Moro Observer tells us he is a benedict. That he came into Moro from his ranch on the 7th, to obtain a license to marry Miss Gussie Lee.

You can hear an opera or a vaudeville entertainment tonight. The opera is "Mascot" at the Baldwin. Price $1; "Vanity Fair" at the Vogt; price 50 cents, 35 and 25; children 15 cents. Take your choice. The former begins at 8:30 and the latter at 8:15.

Last Wednesday Rev. G. Rushing, of the Christian church, received a telegram announcing the serious illness of his brother at Garfield, and left for that place. A card received by the Chronicle this morning announces the death of Socrates Rushing, Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock. He was 38 years, 8 months and 18 days old. The funeral took place at Cheney today.

Have you smoked a clear Filipino cigar made from the finest selected tobacco which I captured on the Isle of Luzon? If not, you are behind the times, as I have only a few High-Life cigars left going at 15 cents apiece, 2 for 25 cents, or $2.50 for a box of 25. Remember that the High-Life cigar is made from the very best Filipino tobacco. Factory No. 105, next to Baldwin saloon on Union St. Ben Ulrich, Manf. 14 1/2 wk

For one afflicted with the blues and who is anxious for a hearty and prolonged laugh, "Vanity Fair" is a good remedy. It is a pleasurable combination of the vaudeville, burlesque and extravaganza, replete with new and entertaining specialties by pretty and shapely girls, comprising in all a good comedy performance. The bill was produced at the Reed last evening and was quite thoroughly enjoyed by the spectators in attendance.—Salem Statesman.

We were almost persuaded to take back what we said yesterday regarding the visit of wheat teams to our city slackening, when we saw the line of teams in front of the warehouses and mills this morning. The force at the Diamond mills these days are on the jump, having no time for resting. They are paying 58 cents for heavy Club and 60 for heavy Bluestem, instead of 57. The quality must be No. 1, however. For 58 lb. Club they pay 56 cents, and for 58-lb. Bluestem, 58 cents.

About thirty of our society young men were present at the club parlors last evening for the purpose of organizing a club to give dances during the winter. F. W. Wilson was elected temporary chairman, and after some discussion as to the best method to be employed in carrying on the parties, it was decided to choose Friday as the regular night, and to give dances every two weeks. An executive committee of three was appointed to make all arrangements and to extend invitations for new members. If arrangements can be completed the opening party will be given next Friday.

There are many ways of expressing appreciation, and one of the most novel is that chosen by members of the Wool Growers' Association in expressing their gratitude to Hon. John Michell for his untiring efforts in behalf of the scalp-bounty bill which was passed at the last legislature. When he arrived at his office this afternoon in front of his door he found a box containing a genuine coyote, of the scalp kind. On top of the box was a note of congratulation and expressions of gratitude for his services in fathering the bill, signed by the Oregon Wool Growers' Association. Mr. Michell is now wondering what to do with the pet, and will no doubt have to scalp it in order to make anything out of the deal.

Vice-President Bancroft, of the Short Line, makes a positive statement that there will be an extra passenger train put on the Short Line and the O. R. & N. He says: "As to putting on the new train on the 15th, we cannot accomplish the change quite on that date. It is all a question of securing rolling stock. Just as soon as we can get the rolling stock, we will put the train on." It is expected that as soon as the line now being constructed between Wal-lula and Riparia is completed, which will be in November, the new schedule will go into effect. There will be a general readjustment of the running times of all trains on the O. R. & N. system and a betterment of the service. It is expected a reduction of two or three hours will be made in the time between Spokane and Portland.

While they have been having snow all around us and heavy frost for over a week, last night the first frost occurred here, but did little damage on account of the dryness of the atmosphere. This might, however, be termed an unusual year. The thermometer last night got down to 29 for the first time so early in the season since October 12, 1881, when it touched 23. On the 11th that year the first snow was seen on the Klickitat, while last Thursday, the 12th, a sprinkling of the beautiful was visible. On October 14, 1878, the mercury registered 32 and snow appeared for the first time. In 1890, the hills were covered on the 16th, but in '91 it made its initial fall on December 22. We generally expect the white caps on the Klickitats about the middle of November, so that our snap cold has come a little early.

A SALEM WEDDING.

Roger B. Sinnott of this City, Takes Up to Himself a Wife.

"Lucky is the bride the sun shines upon" and never was there a fairer October day than yesterday high noon, when Miss Augusta Gertrude Lowndale, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Lowndale, became the bride of Mr. Roger Brass Sinnott, of The Dalles.

Promptly at 12 o'clock Mrs. H. P. McNary, sister of the bride, struck the familiar strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and all thoughts were upon nothing but the wedding party. First came the two maids of honor, Miss Ethel Williams, of Portland, and Miss Elizabeth Foulke, of California, attired exactly alike in dainty rose-pink organdie and carrying large shower bouquets of La France roses. Next came the prayer-book bearer, Master Philip Patterson, who lent quite a great deal to the beauty of the march; and then the bride, who was certainly a "picture fair to see." In all her past loveliness she has never exceeded the brilliancy of this occasion—for Miss Lowndale was always unquestionably "the belle of our town" and all regret that she had to be given up. Her gown was of the sheerest, most exquisite, and beautiful white organdie, long veil pinned with fragrant orange blossoms, and with a bouquet of long-stemmed bride's roses, she was without doubt as lovely a conception as the poets rave about.

Mr. Sinnott was attended by his brother, Mr. N. J. Sinnott.

The main hall of the spacious residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Gray, where the reception was given, was one mass of bright red and green berries, synonymous of the autumn season. The drawing rooms were banked with palms, sweet peas, chrysanthemums and beautiful roses; and the dining room for the bridal party was gorgeous in its array of every conceivable variety of begonias and dainty ferns and emulax.

The table where the bridal pair were seated was artistically decorated; in the center was an immense bowl of cut glass filled with La France roses; suspended from the chandelier and tied to each end of the table was a lover's knot of white mosseline interlaced with greens, and from every available spot the very choicest tropics were in profusion. The other guests were royally served in groups at tete-a-tete tables, where salads, ices, and the bride's cakes were in full evidence.

The intended travelers were then hastened to prepare for the wedding trip, and as the bride ascended to the first landing on the stairs she waved her bouquet in the air three times, then threw it directly into Miss Beulah Patterson's grasp.

Mr. and Mrs. Sinnott were escorted to their carriage from the front entrance of the residence by all the guests, and until they were whirled away all stood longingly wishing them every blessing for their future happiness.—Salem Statesman.

How He Worked His Way.

It takes a soldier to skirmish, wherever he is put, be it on the battlefield or on the railroad track, as was proven last night in the case of John Lloyd, a discharged member of Battery I, Sixth Artillery. He could give the weary Willies a lesson which might be valuable to them.

About 7 o'clock last evening the men employed at Seufert's cannery, hearing groans, rushed to the track and found a man evidently in deep distress, so much so that he would not permit them to touch him. Bringing a sheet, they tenderly lifted him in and bore him to the cannery, and immediately sent word to the city for a physician. Dr. Logan and Agent Ireland took an engine and caboose, soon arriving on the scene, and amid heartrending groans and complaint of broken limbs, the Dr. examined his patient, but to the surprise of the by-standers, finally said: "There's nothing the matter with you, you'd better get along." He insisted that he had a ticket to New York given him by Col. Summers, and that he had lost it, and so a brakeman had kicked him off the train. He was brought back to the city, and upon reaching here, jumped out as lively as a cricket, saying he felt "all right now," but insisted that Agent Ireland right the wrong which had been done him, and procure him another ticket. The aforesaid agent prepared to make every reparation possible; but soon found out from one of the train men that he is a professional and had given train men no end of trouble all the way from Viento up, having been put off a number of times. Engineer Barrett put him off at Seufert's where he conceived the idea of the broken leg racket.
