HARLAN AND LINCOLN.

The recent death of James Harlan recalls the fact that he was the last link connecting the administration of Lincoln with the present time, says the Spokesman-Review. He was the sole survivor of the group of men whom the great war president called to his side during the troubled days of civil war.

The original Lincoln cabinet consisted of William H. Seward as secretary of state, Salmon P. Chase as secretary of the treasury, Simon Cameron as secretary of war, Caleb B. Smith as secretary of the interior, Gideon Welles as secretary of the navy, Montgomery Blair as postmaster general, and Edward Bates as attorney general. Of these only Seward and Welles remained in the cabinet until the death of Lincoln.

Lincoln had three secretaries of the treasury—Chase, Fessenden and McCulloch; two secretaries of war—Cameron and Edwin M. Stanton; three secretaries of the interior—Smith, John P. Usher and James Harlan; two postmasters general—Blair and Dennison, and two attorneys general—Bates and Jas. Speed.

The cabinet of Lincoln was never harmonious. Seward, Chase, Cameron and Bates had been mentioned for the presidency in 1860, and all of them hoped to get the nomination in 1864. Chase was especially aggressive, and during his entire control of the treasury department was working to undermine his great chief. There were strained relations between Chase and Lincoln almost from the first, but Lincoln was a broad gauged man, appreciated Chase's splendid work in handling finances, and not till 1864 did he admit that Chase's usefulness in the cabinet was at an end.

Of all the presidents since Jackson, Lincoln depended the least upon his cabinet to aid him in shaping the policy of his administration, unless it was Mr. Cleveland. Lincoln was always at odds with his ministers, but he allowed each to go his way and always waited until the time for action came, when he usually did about the right thing in spite of anything his cabinet advisers recommended to the contrary.

The services of the late James Harlan in Lincoln's cabinet were brief, but he was a man in whose judgment and fidelity Lincoln had great confidence. Harlan had been one of the pioneers of Republicanism in the West, was well educated, had an unblemished character and was sturdy in his convictions. He was just the man to win the confidence of Lincoln because they were both plain, blunt, honest patriots, and out of the sympathy between them came the marriage of Harlan's daughter to Lincoln's son Robert, the ex-secretary of war.

Lincoln had around him great men, notably Seward and Stanton, but no one of them approached the president in breadth of view, policy and common sense. Harlan made no particularly deep mark on his times, and for twenty years has been lost sight of, but he was one of the best men the West has produced, and in the Mississippi valley his name will be gratefully cherished.

During the winter of 1897 Mr. James Reed, one of the leading citizens and merchants of Clay, Clay Co., W. Va., struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whiskey in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost a complete cure in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. Pain Balm is unequalled for sprains, bruises and rheumatism. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.
