Dr. Styner, the electric doctor, will leave the city Sunday. If you wish to consult him improve the time.

Wheat has dropped somewhat. In Portland they are paying 57 for No. 1 and here the warehouses are giving 52 for No. 1.

The soldier boys are still on their way home, and at about 1:30 tomorrow afternoon 630 Montana troops will arrive here and take dinner at the Umatilla House. Let's give them a more hearty greeting than the Minnesota boys received.

Sterling silver mounted tooth and hair brushes, nail files, button hooks, shoe horns, paper knives, combs, brushes, mirrors, seals, and complete toilet and manicure sets of different designs are found in stock at H. C. Liebe's store in the Vogt block.

Reports from Antelope say the fair is a howling success; that it is the best ever held in this district. The stock exhibit is especially good, and all other exhibits in proportion. The racing has been spoiled by the rainy weather, and the mud is very deep.

The band which the "Breezy Time" company brings with them consists of sixteen pieces, and we are to be favored with two concerts Monday; one at noon and the other in the evening. Be sure to hear them. Bring all the children out and get the benefit of the music.

Walla Walla county is making her boast that 114 marriage licenses have been recorded with the county clerk so far this year. We thought Wasco was doing extra well this year with sixty-nine licenses; but it isn't in it with Walla Walla in that line, and we venture to say we haven't had as many divorce cases either.

There may be "many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," but that doesn't mean when the Columbia has anything to do with it, and the cup is ours again. For, having won the race today, making her three times the winner, the Columbia again gives us the cup. At 2:40 the race was finished, with the Columbia almost a minute ahead of the Shamrock.

"Keeping Cows For Profit" is the well chosen title of the newest work on practical dairying to come under our notice. We understand that a large issue of this little publication is being gratuitously circulated with the compliments of The De Laval Separator Co., 74 Cortlandt street, New York, which concern offers to send a copy to every reader of the CHRONICLE upon request.

It is announced by the management that "A Breezy Time," which will be seen at the Vogt Monday night, is continually comical and always interesting. It is said that no farce comedy upon the road contains so many captivating songs, so many well-built chorus girls, and so many original comedians. The individual talent of the performers is what the management rely upon to make the entertainment worth while attending, and to that end each member of the company has been given full liberty to elaborate his or her individual abilities.

"I have occasion to visit The Dalles every month of the year," said a visitor to our city recently, "and I can never remember of being here when a force of men were not tearing up the streets to mend some broken down sewer." There is more truth than poetry in the assertion of this gentleman, and if the money expended on repairs were used in putting in a new system, as contemplated, how much better it would be. Today workmen are busy digging up Washington street to repair a cave-in at the corner of Third. Would it not be better to remedy the entire evil at once?

These be the days when cyclists "watch their chance and take it a foot." From November 1st until May 1st in Portland they may ride on the sidewalk; but not so in The Dalles, where the ordinance is in force the entire year. There are not a great many of wheels in our city, and if a section were inserted, compelling riders to dismount within thirty feet of pedestrians, it would not be out of the way to allow them the use of sidewalks during the muddy season. The trouble is there are always a few "scorchers," who race along regardless of other people's rights, and the careful rider must bear the consequence of their selfishness.

Engineer Andrews, of the Inland Flyer, got a bath yesterday which he didn't order, and although he doesn't object to taking an "annual," he would a little rather don his bathing suit and be prepared than take water without being warned beforehand. But one of the deck hands neglected to fasten the guard gate, and Andrews took a swim in consequence. Leaving over the gate to see if the Regulator was in sight, Andrews found it was not so substantial as it should have been and was soon out of sight himself. It was then no joking matter, but he held on to the gate until a small boat was sent out to his rescue. It is said the engineer was in the water for nine minutes; but he didn't say so. Next time he'll leave the guard gate alone and lean on the garden gate.

If the opening party given by the Columbia Dancing Club is a criterion by which to judge the remainder of those which will be given during the winter, there is any amount of enjoyment ahead for the members of the club. While there are seventy members, only about forty couples were present, which, however, is a sufficient number to make dancing comfortable, and will perhaps be about the average of those attending. The club was happy in its choice of a hall, for although another hall might be cozier and more easily decorated, there is no floor in town so easy to dance on, as that of the Baldwin opera house, having a spring which is lacking in the other halls. Prof. Birgfeld and Miss Schmidt furnished the music, which was greatly appreciated, particularly the latest catchy selections. There was a freedom and friendly atmosphere prevalent which is sure to make these parties fill a vacancy which was so noticeable last winter, and all are expecting they will be the society events of the season.

More Reports.

The latest dispatch from Goldendale to an exchange, which is as follows, comes branded as simply another report, so we do not vouch for it, nor anything else regarding the much talked of portage road, but simply print it as we find it, and let our readers judge for themselves. It says:

"A report has reached Goldendale and was today confirmed by W. W. Ames of Columbus, that a seven-mile contract of the Dalles portage railway construction had been let to a Mr. McDonald of Portland. Also that active rock work had already begun on a portion of the contract. With the seven miles constructed it is said boats may make connection from the lower river at Big Eddy and also at Celilo Flats on the upper river. It is reported the Central Navigation Company has recently purchased the Jensen farm near Celilo Flats and also it is said that a rival town to Rockland is probable to spring into existence at the Jensen homestead. The fisheries at that point, which supply the Celilo cannery have a national reputation. The Klickitat valley wheat fields will be ten miles nearer the prospective shipping point than to The Dalles, and by a wagon road that will avoid the present sand blows.

"Mr. Ames has great faith in the future of the Columbia river country and he is firm in the belief that Paul F. Mohr and his associates have one of the best propositions on the coast, and he further believes the new town ought to be named 'Mohr,' in recognition of Mr. Mohr's indomitable energy of years in giving an open river to the inland empire."

FAIRLY BEHEADED.

Indian Joe Andrews Lost His Head by Drinking Fire Water.

Like many of his foolish white brothers, one of the Indians of whom we spoke yesterday, allowed his love for fire water to be the cause of his death, and Joe Andrews got on a spree yesterday, which resulted literally in the loss of his head.

He came to the CHRONICLE office in the afternoon selling Indian baskets and showing signs of being somewhat "happy," we immediately sent him to the neighbors. It seems that he continued drinking all afternoon, and at 9 o'clock Indian Pete met him down on First street and he asked Pete to go over to Howe's saloon and get a drink. He refused, and told Joe to go home, but Joe said he was going up to the East End where some gambling was going on among the Indians, and started up First street. At 10:30 J. H. Furlong, night yard master, jumped on the caboose step of a freight train which was coming in from the West just as it reached the Wasco warehouse, and found Joe on the step on the opposite side, when he made him get off.

At 3:30 when a freight train was coming in from Umatilla and switched off on a side track, E. F. Mills, the brakeman, and another man saw a body on the track about 100 yards above the Wasco warehouse. Investigating they found it to be an Indian, whose body was lying across the track with his neck toward the east and his head about two feet away.

In the absence of Coroner Butts, Recorder Gates and an undertaker went up and brought the body down and this morning an inquest was held with the following result:

In the matter of the inquest over the body of Joe Andrews: We the jury summoned by Ned N. Gates, recorder of Dalles City, and ex-officio justice of the peace, to inquire into the cause of the death of the body now before us, from an inspection of the body, and the testimony of the witnesses produced before us, and after careful consideration, find the following facts:

That the name of the deceased was Joe Andrews, that he came to his death between the hours of 10:30 p. m. Oct. 19th, and 3 o'clock a. m. Oct. 20th, 1899, by being run across the neck by a car or cars, on side track No. 3, near the Wasco warehouse, while in Dalles City, Wasco county, Oregon, in an intoxicated condition and as far as the jury can ascertain, no blame can be attached to any one for said death except deceased. Dated at Dalles City, Oct. 20, 1899.

OLD-TIME SINGING SCHOOL.

Is It a Thing of the Past—If So, Why Is Such the Case?

In a previous issue of THE CHRONICLE attention was called to the absence of the old-time singing school; and of the great need which existed for such instruction among the young.

There are high priced vocal teachers, but what we need is class teachers, where for a nominal sum the young may be taught to read music and cultivate their voices to a reasonable extent.

We clip the following from the Oregonian, as it expresses our sentiments exactly:

"The mother of two girls of ten and sixteen years, whom she wishes to learn to sing, said yesterday: 'I wish there were old-fashioned singing schools now, the same as I used to go to down East, when I was a girl.'

"It appears that such schools have gone out of fashion, and the question is what has taken their place, and how are the boys and girls now taught to sing. The woman who made the remark was asked if the public schools did not furnish instructions in music, but seems to be of the opinion that they did not. A few years ago all the pupils in the public schools were given instructions in music, and the time devoted to singing was greatly enjoyed by them, and they learned to sing all sorts of patriotic songs. Then, for some reason, music was dropped in the school for several years. Of late it has been taken up again in the upper grades, and is being extended, it is said, down to the lower grades by degrees. An educator says that a child can learn more about music in the ten minutes devoted to it daily in the public schools than could be learned in the old-fashioned singing schools, which met once a week. This is probably true, but it seems that the instruction in music given, or supposed to be given, in the public schools is not entirely satisfactory to all parents. Many teachers in the schools know nothing about music, and many parents would not complain if their children were not taught singing in the schools if there were any other place where they could be instructed in this accomplishment. Of course, there are plenty of teachers of singing who take pupils who are far enough advanced and charge $2 to $5 per hour for training them; but this is an expense that not all parents can stand. The question is, how or where can children who have no intention of becoming opera singers or members of a church choir, but who have voices which are worth being cultivated to a reasonable extent, receive their cultivation, at a reasonable price, outside of the public schools? Are there any old-fashioned singing schools nowadays, and, if not, why not?"
