Foul-Smelling Catarrh.

Catarrh is one of the most obstinate diseases, and hence the most difficult to get rid of.
 There is but one way to cure it. The disease is in the blood, and all the sprays, washes and inhalant mixtures in the world can have no permanent effect whatever upon it. Swift's Specific cures Catarrh permanently, for it is the only remedy which can reach the disease and force it from the blood.
 Mr. B. P. McAllister, of Harrodsburg, Ky., had Catarrh for years. He writes: "I could see no improvement whatever, though I was constantly treated with sprays and washes, and different inhalant remedies. In fact, I could feel that each winter I was worse than the year previous. Finally it was brought to my notice that Catarrh was a blood disease, and after thinking over the matter, I saw it was unreasonable to expect to be cured by remedies which only reached the surface. I then decided to try S. S. S., and after a few bottles were used, I noticed a perceptible improvement. Continuing the remedy, the disease was forced out of my system, and a complete cure was the result. I advise all who have this dreadful disease to abandon their local treatment, which has never done them any good, and take S. S. S., a remedy that can reach the disease and cure it."
 To continue the wrong treatment for Catarrh is to continue to suffer. Swift's Specific is a real blood remedy, and cures obstinate, deep-seated diseases, which other remedies have no effect whatever upon. It promptly reaches Catarrh, and never fails to cure even the most aggravated cases.

S.S.S. For Blood

MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

A Smart Boy's Clever Scheme for Buying Stamps at the Post Office.

The proprietor of a well-known hotel in the center of the city sent one of his office boys to the post office for postage stamps. The cash drawer contained $1.50 in pennies, and the proprietor wanted to get rid of them. Bundling them up into neat packages, he dispatched the office boy to Ninth and Chestnut streets with them.
 "Get 75 two-cent stamps," the hotel man said, "and hurry back."
 Well, the boy got back, but not in a hurry. In fact, he was gone so long that his employer called him down when he did return.
 "Where on earth were you?" the hotel man asked. "Go over to Chicago for those stamps?"
 "No, sah," replied the boy. "I only went to de post office. But they don't seem to like pennies there very much, sah."
 "Why not?" demanded the hotel man.
 "Cause the young woman at de window wouldn't take more'n 24 cents' worth at a time, sah."
 "Then you didn't get the stamps?"
 "Oh, yes, sah. Indeed I did git de stamps, sah."
 "How did you get them if the stamp clerks wouldn't take the money?"
 The young fellow grinned.
 "Worked a scheme on 'em, sir, worked a scheme on 'em. She said she wouldn't take more'n 24 cents' worth of the stamps at a time. See?"
 His employer nodded in the affirmative.
 "Well," continued the young fellow, "I scratched my head after she told me that, but pretty soon I tumbled to a scheme. I fishes out 24 cents and lays 'em down on de stamp window."
 "Gimme 12 twos," I said.
 "The twos were laid out on the counter. 'Gimme 12 more twos,' I added, when I had the first lot safely tucked in my pocket. I got 'em, and also enough more bunches to make up the $1.50 worth I wanted before I got through. Of course, the young woman was mad all over, but I couldn't help that, sah. I was there to get you de stamps, sah, and I had to do it."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

THE DEATH OF DARIUS.

Alexander's Chagrin and the Persian King's Magnanimity in His Last Moments.

Prof. Wheeler's eighth paper on Alexander the Great describes "Alexander's Mightiest Battle," wherein at Gaugamela, with 47,000 men, he overthrew Darius and his million. His pursuit of the Persian king, some months later, and his failure to capture him alive, were among the most striking incidents in the conqueror's history.
 "There was no time for delay. Men and horses were already fatigued by the forced marches, but there could be no halt. It was a race for a prize Alexander had set his heart upon gaining. On they went again over hill and valley, through the night and on until noon. Then they came to a village which the party had left only the day before, but with the intention of traveling by night. Still they were 24 hours ahead. Alexander's troop was almost exhausted. Did the villagers know of no shorter road? There was one, but through a desert country, with no water for horse or man. Quickly transferring 500 selected infantrymen to as many horses taken from the cavalry, and directing the rest of the infantry to follow by the main road, he set off by the canter by the desert road. Men fell by the way, horses foundered, but all night long the mad chase was forced. Nearly 50 miles had been covered. Then in the gray morning light was discovered on ahead the straggling caravan. There was no preparation for defense. One glimpse of those dreaded horsemen, and then a wild scramble for life. The few who stayed to fight were cut down. Bessus and his aids had tried to induce the captive shah to mount a horse and flee, but he stoutly refused. Then they drove their javelins into his body and scurried off.
 "On down the dismantled line of the caravan the Macedonian riders came, no more than three score able to keep pace with the leader. They rode over abundance of gold and silver that lay scattered about, and passed by chariots full of women, which wandered here and there for want of drivers, and still they rode on, hoping to overtake the van of the fight and find Darius there' (Plutarch). But nowhere was Darius to be found, until at last a rider, straggling away from the rest, found a wagon far away from the road, by a valley pool where the frightened, unguided mules had dragged it. In it lay the dying shah. 'Stia he asked for a little cool water to drink, and when he had drunk he said to Polystratus, who had given it to him: 'Sir, this is the bitter extremity of my ill fortune, to receive a benefit which I cannot repay; but Alexander will repay you. The god recompense to Alexander the kindness he has done my mother and my wife and children. I give him through you this clasp of the hand.' With these words he took the hand of Polystratus and died. When Alexander reached the spot he was pained and distressed, as one could see, and he took off his own mantle and laid it upon the body and wrapped it around' (Plutarch).—Century.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Notes on Up-to-Date Costumes for the Summer Season.
 Hand-painted silk gauzes and mousseline de soie are favored materials for evening gowns, with tulle, and point d'esprit in the lead.
 Taffeta in pale colors is also used for evening gowns. It is trimmed with flower designs of white mousseline de soie outlined with narrow ribbon, and the skirt opens over a tablier of tulle trimmed crosswise with spangled lace insertion.
 Narrow black velvet ribbon is used to trim colored pique gowns.
 Brilliantine of the finest, most silky quality is the favored material for bathing suits, unless wool is required, and then French bunting and English serge are the best fabrics. Cream-colored braid on white serge or molair, which forms the collar and belt, is the favorite trimming, but, for the sake of variety, lace yokes are one feature of decoration. Black, blue and white are the popular colors.
 Braids finished with a short fringe are among the new dress trimmings.
 Both black and white silk taffeta coats will be worn with cotton, silk, wool and lace gowns this season. They are made of the soft, thick and consequently expensive taffeta, finely tucked and lined with white. Some of them are Eton shape, with or without rounded points at either side of the front, while others have the scalloped basque finish or are cut in the form of a Russian blouse without much of the real blouse effect.
 Baby ribbon in black and white mixed edges the ruffles on a white organdie gown.
 Flowered linen lawn gowns, trimmed with wide bands of blue veiling, lined with silk matching the color in the flowers, and edged with black silk braid, are the extreme of fashion in the way of combination and novelty.
 Sun-plaited skirts of linen lawn are very good style trimmed the width of a hem from the lower edge with a wide band of cream lace insertion.—N. Y. Sun.
