Collis P. Huntington recently stated that the young men of America spent entirely too much time in the school-room. A better assertion would have been that the young men of our cities spend entirely too much time in the pool rooms. -Rural Spirit.

The seats for "My Friend From India" will be on sale tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at the Butler Drug Co's. store. Mr. Butler tells us that more interest is manifested in the opening of the box sheet for this play than in any previous engagement this season. The fact is people are becoming tired of vaudeville, and are anxious to hear something with a plot. Besides "My Friend From India" has a reputation which is known to all theater-goers.

The ladies of the Aid Society of the Congregational church spent a very pleasant afternoon with Mrs. A. C. Giger yesterday. Several musical selections were given and other entertainment had been prepared; beside a lunch was served at the close of the afternoon. A large number of members and friends were present.

Tonight will occur the first dancing party given by Prof. Sandvig, the new dancing teacher. The grand march takes place at 9:15, and Prof. Birgfeld will furnish music, with an orchestra of three. Tuesday night in Portland an organization called the "Oregon Association of Opticians" was perfected. W. E. Garretson, of this city, was elected treasurer. The purpose for which this association is constituted is the establishment and maintenance of all legitimate optical trade in the state of Oregon, and the interchange and discussion of optical, social and business matters, and the encouragement of literature and science pertaining to optics.

In the late premium list of the Youths Companion will be found a cut giving an idea of what can be done in the Florentine bent iron work. The cut is taken from a photograph of the exhibit of bent iron work made by J. C. Hostetler last year at the fair pavilion here. His work is certainly beautiful, and he should feel proud that a photograph of it reaches so many readers in the United States, for the Companion is read in more homes than any other journal published in the union except the Ladies Home Journal, which ranks highest, having very nearly 800,000 subscribers.

The employees at the Oregon Telephone office in this city feel positive now that they "take the cake," the assurance being furnished them by Mrs. Summers, wife of the agent of that company at Prineville. During the yacht races that lady made the promise that if the girls would keep her posted on the races, a cake would be forthcoming, and true to her word, yesterday the hungry operators were delighted to receive by express a large coconut cake that even the Columbia couldn't beat, for the proof of the cake is in eating it, and we know whereof we speak. To see it disappear like a flash, showed the boys and girls were used to the electric movement, whether dealing with messages or cake.

It was amusing this morning to watch the dilatory manner in which a workman on Second street was handling a hoe; but taking a second look one would discover a ball and chain in the vicinity of his feet, which accounted for his lack of enthusiasm. A few days ago he was found meandering the streets, and asking assistance. Mr. Cates offered him work on the steam saw, but he refused and the marshal forthwith called upon him to leave the city. Yesterday he made his appearance at Joe Stadelman's place, where he was told where he could secure work. He then began to swear and demand help, and the marshal was summoned, who soon landed him in jail, and he was fined $5, which he is working out on the street. He is an ugly customer, and accomplishes but little. There is no excuse whatever for idleness these days, for everywhere workmen are in demand, and 'tis not a deed of charity to feed or in any way assist tramps now.

An Undorned General.

Recalling General George Crook in the days of his Indian campaigns, General Charles King says of him in The Youth's Companion.

"Young officers fresh from West Point looked at him in wonderment. Instead of a somewhat unapproachable dignitary in precise uniform and epaulets and embroidered sash and belt, they were welcomed by a cordial hand clasp from a tall, bushy-bearded man, with twinkling gray-blue eyes, in an old shouch felt, hat, flannel shirt, rough canvas shooting coat and trousers and common soldiers' boots.

"Generally his beard was tied up with a string or red tape—the only use he had for that usual military indispensable. He sat at camp fire or in the simply furnished parlor of his army home, listening to the chat about him, rarely speaking, and assiduously playing solitaire with a pack of cards produced from an inner pocket. He could play a capital hand at whist, but fought shy of a game with careless or forgetful players. He heard everything that was said and saw everything that was going on about him, but seldom gave a sign.

"From the so-called pleasures of society, dinners, dances and receptions, he shrank in dismay. He ate only the simplest food. He never smoked. He hated wine. He wouldn't touch spirits; he marveled that any man should. 'It spoils his shooting,' said he; and our general was a capital shot. He could foot it through an old-fashioned quadrille or Virginia reel, but nothing else, and would always get away on social occasions into the first obscure corner he could find, and then out would come the old pack of cards."

MORE BEAUTIFUL VIEWS.

Oregon and Washington Will Be Famous Through This Medium of Advertising.

This morning E. F. Gifford, our photographer, showed us some views which caused the remark that if Oregon had no other advertising than that which is received from the number of beautiful views which are constantly being taken by her professional and amateur photographers and scattered broadcast throughout the East—sent to friends, sold to tourists, displayed in expositions and placed in railroad offices, hotels and other public places—she would not lack advertisement sufficient to show just what her scenery, her products and her industries are, and to what an extent the latter is carried on. Only yesterday the CHRONICLE mentioned the fact that a Dalles lady was displaying to a company in Illinois photographs of our wonderful scenery and telling them of the Pacific coast. And so it is throughout the union, and Oregon is becoming known.

Mr. Gifford is furnishing the Oregonian with views which will probably be used in their annual edition, and to that end made a trip to Columbus and spent yesterday "shooting" everything which was worth being shot, and he secured some fine views; one in particular which to our taste is perhaps the most artistic he has yet obtained. It is a view along the bank of the Columbia. In the immediate foreground are two Indian tepees, placed right on the stony bank of the river. A dog stands guard over the "home," for the artist could not induce the swash to endanger his life by being taken. At the water's edge is tied a small row boat, the shadow of which is reflected in the water, and in the distance Mt. Hood is faintly seen towering above surrounding mountains, which make a beautiful background.

Other pictures, which are also splendid views, are of the wheat stored on the river bank, (and Mr. Gifford says 80,000 sacks were piled there yesterday) while the ferry boat stands loaded ready to take its wheat across. A similar view is that of a band of sheep being driven onto the boat and others waiting their turn. These will be worth a great deal as an advertising medium.

In these days when so many photographers are in pursuit of the wily swash with a view to obtaining his picture, one would hardly imagine that the old superstition against photographs still existed among them. But while some of them ask but to be recompensed, others still refuse the Boston man an audience; and Mr. Gifford found himself in a tight place yesterday. Determined to secure a view of their huts, or tepees, he at once endeavored to persuade the owner and his klotchman to pose, but they were stubborn in their refusal and running into their rude abode shut themselves up. When he had prepared his camera and was about to take the picture, a young girl ran out and began throwing rocks at him, but finally disappeared. Then a young brave rode down to the hut and held a consultation, which he feared would prove disastrous, but, in spite of all, he secured the picture. Whether they, like many of their brothers, feared to have a certain number of years taken from their life by having their likeness taken, or, like the Celilo Indians, had
