ENGLAND TO MAKE VIGOROUS WAR.

Yesterday's work in parliament shows that the war against the Boers is going to be pushed with vigor. Polonius' advice to Laertes to "beware of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in, bear't that the opposed may beware of thee," is a guide for England's conduct these days. England made no adequate preparation for the war. The opening of hostilities found the British outnumbered on all sides by the Boers. British territory in the east and west has been invaded, but no reverses of consequence have been met by the British thus far.

The Globe-Democrat says: The militia and the militia reserves are to be enrolled in the army and an additional force of 35,000 is to be enlisted. This is the substance of the latest news from England. The entire extra force thus provided for is in the neighborhood of 180,000 men. This looks like an abnormally large force to be employed against the two little Boer republics. Indeed, the chances are that the militia will not be sent against the Boers at all, but will be utilized in England to replace troops sent to South Africa. The policy of raising an army which will be able to make a long resistance on the part of the Boers hopeless is a merciful policy. It will probably give a chance to patch up a peace before much serious fighting takes place.

What the world wants to see now is an end to the war at the earliest possible hour. The war is likely to be short in any case, but the preparations which are being made by England will have a tendency to make it shorter than anybody supposed at the time it began. The talk, of course, that the Boers will never give up while a man of them remains alive is absurd. Spain made a boast of that sort in 1898. Every country which feels that it is going to be beaten does this when it enters into war. No civilized people, however, fight in this way. Men who have sense enough to get a place among the peoples above the savage or barbarian status will not keep on fighting when they know that further fighting means certain destruction. No possible good can be accomplished in that way. By accepting the situation, as she did soon after Santiago, Spain showed that her political leaders had humanity as well as sense. The Boer politicians, notwithstanding a few foolish sanguinary boasts which they made just in advance of the beginning of the war, will undoubtedly show that they are civilized men, and accept the inevitable after a few defeats. The terrible destruction of life and property and the prolonged disturbance on the speculative exchanges which most persons feared a few days ago as a result of the war, will fortunately hardly be realized.

Admiral Schley's response to a committee from the Woman's National Industrial League, which called on him to present a copy of a resolution adopted by the league, asking contributions from industrial workers to purchase a home for him, was worthy of the man and his record. He said: "While I feel deeply touched by the desire of your committee, which the resolution brings to my attention, and sincerely appreciate the purpose and wishes you so kindly suggest to me, I feel that I ought to ask you to defer this matter until the wants and needs of a cold winter, now coming on, have passed, and its demands in the thresholds of some of the great army of industrial workers have first been met before any provision is made for me. With expressions of deep gratitude to you the matter is left to your consideration."

"I wish to express my thanks to the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, for having put on the market such a wonderful medicine," says W. W. Massingill, of Beaumont, Texas. There are many thousands of mothers whose children have been saved from attacks of dysentery and cholera infantum who must also feel thankful. It is for sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.
