THE VANDERBILT WILL.

A great American estate has been divided. The will of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt was made public Thursday, and while the eldest son, Cornelius, Jr., was not cut off with a shilling, he was given only one million and a half out of a fortune which probably aggregated one hundred millions, says the Spokesman-Review.

The reason for this discrimination was that young Cornelius married against the wishes of his parents. While a student at Yale he fell in love with Miss Wilson, one of the brightest and best of New York's young society women, and, in spite of the fact that she was ten years his senior, pressed his suit and won. The father's protests were unavailing. Young Cornelius had met the woman he loved. The marriage took place, but all of the Vanderbilt family refused to attend it. Nevertheless the young couple has lived happily and so far as the world knows, it has been an ideal match.

Of course the late railway king had a right to do with his own as he saw fit. But his name will not rise in the estimation of his fellow countrymen for having practically disinherited his oldest boy because that boy married the girl he loved. Had the lad run away with a variety actress, or formed a matrimonial alliance with an adventuress there might have been reason for the family displeasure, but as he chose for a life partner a very worthy young woman, fully his equal in blood, breeding and social station, it seems rather unjust that parental dissatisfaction should arbitrarily have divested the young man of his heritage.

The late Cornelius Vanderbilt was a good and just man all through life, but the world will say he made a mistake when, in a moment of impatience, he cut off his eldest boy because the latter found a girl he loved and was willing to stand by her even if he did lose the New York Central Railway.

Says the New York Sun: "Col. Bryan is now beginning to complain that he was counted out in 1896. Curiously enough, he began his lamentations in Kentucky, where he had gone to talk for the election of the maker of a notoriously unfair election law. On the whole, the colonel is not adding to his reputation by his present performances. We had not supposed that there was any man capable of discourse of reason who believed the wild yarns put forth by the Hon. James K. Jones, of Arkansas, after the election in 1896 as to the counting-out of Bryan. Since, however, the latter doesn't know that he was fairly licked in 1896, it is doubly the duty of the Republicans to lick him handsomely in 1900. The colonel seems to be a hard learner and a hard loser."

Admiral Dewey has said again, and quite as emphatically as before, that he is not, and never will be, a candidate for the presidency. He dwells upon the fact that the career of a naval officer can not be that of a politician, and that he must be content with the honors of his profession. The admiral's ambitions are evidently along the line pursued throughout his life. He has no desire whatever to enter an untried field. By the advice of his physician, Dewey has been compelled to reconsider his acceptance of invitations to several cities anxious to give him a welcome. The strain of going into politics as a presidential candidate would be far greater. It is clear that the admiral is not to be caught by the arts of selfish politicians who would use his great name for their own purposes.

"I wish to express my thanks to the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, for having put on the market such a wonderful medicine," says W. W. Massingill, of Beaumont, Texas. There are many thousands of mothers whose children have been saved from attacks of dysentery and cholera infantum who must also feel thankful. It is for sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

That Joyful Feeling

With the exhilarating sense of renewed health and strength and internal cleanliness, which follows the use of Syrup of Figs, is unknown to the few who have not progressed beyond the old-time medicines and the cheap substitutes sometimes offered but never accepted by the well-informed.
