He Tried a Sample Bottle

Nearly every day people come into drug stores and ask the Druggists to recommend some medicine for their trouble. Very often they refuse to do so, because, as a rule, they do not believe it proper to advise anyone to take a patent medicine of which they do not know the ingredients. It is the physician's business to make an exception, however, when a gentleman who had been troubled for years with a nasty hacking cough, advised Acker's English Remedy. He tried a sample bottle, and was cured before he had taken half of it, at no cost whatever. This is an exceptional case, however, as it usually takes two or three bottles.

(Signed) A. B. Cook, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Sold at 25¢, 50¢, and $1 a bottle, throughout the United States and Canada; and in England, at 1s. 2d., 2s. 3d., 4s. 6d. If you are not satisfied after buying, return the bottle to your druggist, and get your money back.

A CRYSTAL CAVE.

Black Hills Curiosity for the Paris Exposition.

The Mammoth Cave in Elk Creek Canyon to be reproduced in miniature for the World's Fair.

The Black hills will have a curiosity at the Paris exposition in the shape of a miniature of the Mammoth Crystal cave, which is situated in Elk creek canyon, about 20 miles southeast of this city. J. G. Keith, one of the owners of the cave, left Deadwood last night for Paris to sign a contract with the exposition management for space. He has been given a room under the Eiffel tower 50x75 feet, with a high ceiling. He will take over five carloads of material for the construction of the cave, mostly lime water crystals and colored quartz rock, which will line the inside walls of the cavern. The Mammoth Crystal cave made a great hit at the world's fair exposition, later at Atlanta and recently at Antwerp.

The Mammoth Crystal cave was first discovered by the McBride brothers about 12 years ago, while prospecting for a gold mine in an old tunnel in Elk creek canyon, which had been excavated years before by an old prospector named Jacobs. One of the brothers noticed a strong current of air blowing out through a hole in the side of the tunnel, and further investigation opened up a large chamber several feet square. Since the first discovery the owners of the cave have been constantly opening up new chambers and making passageways connecting them, until it is possible now to walk miles underground and not less than 200 chambers have been opened up.

Pat Man's Misery is the first chamber to be given a name. It is a very low, tortuous passageway that leads into a series of rooms beyond. Mold chamber is a weird place, on account of the great quantities of thick, white mold, of delicate texture, very prolific in growth. The next room is called the Menagerie, so called by reason of the different images of animals in stone, the most realistic being the arctic seals. Poverty Flat is a room about 60x250 feet, with a low ceiling. The room derives its name from the fact that the walls are destitute of crystals, being very smooth and water-worn. Notre Dame is the first chamber to show the fine hex work of the cave. It is a delicate webwork, brownish in color, a little coarser, perhaps, than the bowerwork of the famous Wind cave. The room is about 6x150, with a ceiling 20 feet high. A distinguished visitor from Chicago had the honor of naming a large chamber after Calkin's Gallery, of Chicago. With a little imagination a person can see a great many beautiful pictures on the walls and ceiling of the room. Whole room contains some more of the menagerie. There is a perfect image of a whale which is 30 feet in length, with eyes, mouth, fins and everything in perfect order. Perched above the whale is the American eagle, life size, with wings outstretched.

A descent of about 65 feet down Rip Van Winkle's stairway takes the visitor to the second level in the cave known commonly as the water level. Red Flats is passed through, the chamber being noted for its beautiful red crystals. In this chamber is the drip stone, a mammoth water crystal four feet high and two feet at the base, which has been formed by the dripping of the water from the ceiling to the floor below.

The Abode of the Fairies is the pride of the cave. Here are found the Needles, Chimes, Cleopatra's Needle, the Bridal Veil and a number of other natural curiosities. One can easily imagine the old nursery stories to be true about the fairies' cave with rubies and diamonds galore. Slab room is a curious place. All of the crystals have fallen from the ceiling to the floor, leaving it bare and smooth. A new chamber has been opened recently which has been called Klondike room. It is reached by a tortuous passage called Chilkoot Pass, which is 155 feet long. Until recently the floor of the chamber has been covered with water, but it has now all seeped away, leaving the floor covered with soft water crystals called popcorn crystals, which makes the room the most beautiful in the cave. The crystals can be crushed in the hand, and it will be an interesting experiment to watch the slow hardening, which may take years or only months.

Other pieces of interest to be visited are the world's fair grounds, Ribbon room, Cathedral, Diamond Field, and others. New chambers are being discovered and connected by passageways, and it would seem that only a small part of the wonderful cave has been discovered.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE LITTLE FILIPINOS

Peculiarities of the People Under Aguinaldo.

Odd Experiences of Uncle Sam's Soldiers with the Willy Natives of Luzon—Their Style of Fighting.

This little black man who is causing us the same kind of trouble that the boy experiences with a hornet's nest cannot be understood in a day. When captured he acts as if his lot had fallen among old friends. He grins and points beyond our skirmishers, seeming to think that the aspect of his fleeing countrymen is a huge joke. The next minute, but give him the chance, he is likely to send a bullet into an American's back. For such an offense Maj. Gen. Anderson once had a Filipino strung up to a tree on the spot, this being the only American military execution thus far recorded in the Philippines.

A giant private of the Montanas chose a different method. When he was fired on at a distance of about ten yards and missed, he caught his enemy, took his gun away from him and then laid him across his knees. After he had vigorously applied a piece of bamboo he seized the enemy by the seat of the trousers and threw him toward the rear.

"There!" he said. "Don't you let me catch you playing with firearms again." The little black man's confidence in the European rifle has waned. In the beginning he thought that he had only to discharge his musket at a white man and the white man was dead. This led to the firing from the houses and the reckless chances which the Filipinos took at first when their losses were so great. Now they apparently are "good" after they are captured, and they do not fire from houses. Most of whatever their leaders know of military practice they have learned from the Spaniards. They are as facile in imitation as the Chinese. Their buglers now do our calls as well as their own. If watching us they found out that they have been firing too high, and now they are trying to fire low. They succeed until the volleys from our skirmish line begin to pour in. Then they eringe too much in their trenches to aim on a level. Their trenches (of the Spanish type) are built under cover, at strategic points, which admit of easy defense and retreat, with the smallest possible exposure, once the Americans advance. On a wall above the line of one insurgent trench were 16 abrasures by bullets in a space two feet by one.

Such music as was played there is disconcerting. The little black man will not remain to hear it after our men are within 250 yards. At running he is really the American's superior. His bare feet never get sore. He has no clothing to impede his progress except cotton shirt and trousers. He knows the bypaths and the fords of the streams. But he feels that it is very unfair of us to make him retreat. We are not practicing warfare as he understands it at all. What is the use of rifles that will shoot 2,500 yards if you are going to try to catch the enemy with your hands?

Aguinaldo's officers are highly incensed about our artillery, it is said. If they have no guns we ought to use none, and if they have three or four or five, we ought to use only three or four or five, as the case may be. What has happened, however, was to have been expected after we refused to fire back and forth between trenches in the moonlight, which is the only kind and generous method of making war in the tropics.

In the march to Malolos our men marched and fought all day under the beating sun, slept on the ground, swam rivers and did everything which it was supposed by the natives that white men could not do. They thought that we would not attempt to drive them out of more than one of the intrenchments at a time, and then rest at least a week after each effort. A prisoner explained his feelings by saying: "Th-r-r-r-t!" and making a rapid movement with his hands.—Frederick Palmer, in Collier's Weekly.

Shooting Clay Plugs Through Iron.

The tallow candle which is shot through a door must hide its head before a seven and a half ounce plug of clay which has been so fired as to perforate an iron plate an inch thick. The velocity of the clay plug was tremendous. It has been estimated that the speed necessary must be over 1,800 feet a second. Experiments of this kind were conducted by Capt. Cooper Key, of the British army, at the Royal Arsenal. A special gun was employed and pressed cylinders of raw dry clay three inches long and two inches in diameter were used. Eventually one of these plugs went through a cast-iron plate one inch thick from a distance of not more than 25 feet.—N. Y. World.
