DOWEY IN POLITICS.

Here is a story of Admiral Dewey which it is believed has not before appeared in print. When in the fall of 1897 he was an applicant for the command of the Asiatic squadron his official request was not viewed with any degree of favor by the department, and he was politely (for they always do official things, no matter how disagreeable, in a most sublimely courteous manner) refused the assignment. Finding that he could not make it through official circles he tried political ones, with the result that through influence he received the coveted command. It was not the intention, however, of the department to allow him to depart unrelucted for having forced his orders, and he was summoned one day to the presence of the secretary, who said to him: "Commodore Dewey, your orders to the command of the Asiatic squadron have just been issued, but against the judgment of the department, which does not feel that you hold the proper qualifications for such a position, and which also deprecates the fact that you have employed political influence to secure the assignment." "So," replied the commodore in a musing tone. "May I, Mr. Secretary, ask you one question in reply to the statement you have made?" "Most certainly." "Then," went on the commodore, "if you so disapprove the use of political influence to secure personal ends, how did you achieve your present position in the cabinet, Mr. Secretary?" The answer of the department is not recorded.

NO DEFEAT.

If the Boers keep up the pace set by them in their late engagements with the English, a very crushing defeat will be the result of the present war. The English appear to have lost their heads. Very little excuse is due commanding officers for the manner in which they allowed their troops to be surrounded and killed by much larger forces, when it would appear that they were cognizant of the fact.—Brownsville Times.

This is scarcely possible, says the Statesman. The English nation cannot afford it. The British have put their hands to the plow and they cannot turn back. They have the power to utterly crush the contending Boers, and they will use it. This may be done at fearful cost of life and enormous expenditure of treasure. But a proud and rich, and mighty nation cannot afford to count the cost. However much any one may wish it were otherwise, we cannot see upon what hypothesis he can predict a "crushing defeat" for the British, in the end. It cannot be, if no powerful nation interferes.

Aguinaldo was quickly transformed by the preliminary report of the Philippine commission from the George Washington of the Philippines to an ignorant and mercenary half savage. He will be changed by the military operations now being commenced from a renegade to a runnygade.

Aguinaldo will probably be surprised to see the thousands of United States soldiers proceeding to business, notwithstanding the elections being held and the impending meeting of congress. It will mix up his ideas of our government more than they have been mixed before.
