DEATH OF MAJOR LOGAN.

General Otis reports the death in battle of Major John A. Logan of Illinois. Young Logan fell while gallantly leading his battalion, says the Review. The sorrowful news carries grief to a white-haired mother in Washington and to a bereaved wife and three children in Ohio.

Young Logan was a worthy scion of a noble sire. General Logan volunteered as a private soldier in the Mexican war, but rose to the rank of lieutenant. When the South fired on Sumpter, Logan was a member of congress. He left his seat, overtook the troops that were marching out of Washington, and fought in the ranks of Colonel Richardson's regiment in the battle of Bull Run, being among the last to leave the field. He then organized the Thirty-first Illinois Infantry, and was appointed its colonel. At Belmont, under Grant, he led a successful bayonet charge, and his horse was shot from under him. His rise to eminence was meteoric. From the ranks to a regiment, from a regiment to a brigade, from a brigade to a division, and from a division to a corps, and always his conduct was characterized by rare courage, unusual sagacity and lofty patriotism.

The war ended, Logan re-entered congress, serving first in the house and then in the senate. At the Republican national convention in June, 1884, he was nominated to the second place on the ticket with Blaine. He died suddenly in Washington in December, 1886, and on learning of his death, Mr. Blaine said:

"I never knew a more fearless man. He did not quail before public opinion when he had once made up his mind any more than he did before the guns of the enemy when he headed a charge of his enthusiastic troops. While there have been more illustrious military leaders in the United States, and more illustrious leaders in legislative halls, there has, I think, been no man in this country who has combined the two careers in so eminent a degree as General Logan."

As the father lived, the son died, "heading a charge of his enthusiastic troops." There have been, in this war, so many nobody sons of somebody, that it is pleasing to record the fact that young Logan rose magnificently to the noble traditions of a noble family.

THE EGG MYSTERY.

The Portland Evening Telegram has this to say regarding the importation of eggs to Oregon:

One of the mysteries of Oregon is eggs, or at least some facts about eggs are mysteries. Why do stale, imported eggs retail at 25 or 30 cents a dozen? And why must any eggs be imported at all? Why can't, or why don't Oregonians supply the home market with plenty of fresh eggs? Why can the farmers of Missouri and Iowa export millions of dozens of eggs annually, and have all they can use besides, while almost every year Oregon has to send to those states for eggs, and pay twice their price there for stale eggs? Surely the climate here is not poisonous to hens. Certainly it is easy to raise abundance of the best kinds of feed for them. Some people have indeed put forth the excuse that "poultry doesn't do well here." This is nonsense. It is the people who make a lame, loose pretense to raise poultry that don't do well. But there's no use talking about it. Why Oregon farmers don't raise all the eggs we can consume, and be able to sell them at from 12 to 20 cents a dozen, according to the season, is a mystery.

All persons wishing to take children, either boys or girls, for legal adoption or on indenture, should write to W. T. Gardner, superintendent of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society of Oregon, at Portland, who can procure for them desirable children of all ages. All applications must be filed in advance.

I had dyspepsia fifty-seven years and never found permanent relief till I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Now I am well and feel like a new man," writes S. J. Fleming, Murray, Neb. It is the best digestant known. Cures all forms of indigestion. Physicians everywhere prescribe it.

Millions of dollars, is the value placed by Mrs. Mary Bird, Harrisburg, Pa., on the life of her child, which she saved from croup by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. It cures all coughs, colds and throat and lung troubles.
