Keeps and Cheating.

A Salem mother writes to the Statesman as follows:

"Have others besides myself noticed the collections of school boys, in various parts of the city, playing marbles for 'keeps?' These little fellows are often encouraged in this form of gambling by older boys and men (God save the mark!) and the thing has grown to be a small-sized nuisance, to say nothing of the deleterious influence on the character of the boys. The thing will grow on them, and they will become mature gamblers. This is the dangerous feature of it. When I was a girl, the teachers of the schools were very severe in dealing with this offense. Is there not a good deal of school discipline, and home discipline, too, needed in Salem; a good deal more than is exercised?"

Whether "keeps" is played as much in The Dalles as Salem, and gives quite as much annoyance to teachers, we know not. However, there is another evil in schools everywhere, which causes the instructors more trouble than anything else. We refer to the habit of cheating, so extensively practiced and so difficult to overcome. Pupils who are perfectly honest in every other respect seem to think nothing of cheating in regard to lessons or examinations, and use all sorts of dishonorable means, keeping teachers constantly on the alert to prevent it. There has always been this same difficulty, and such a practice must certainly tell on the character in after years.

Were parents to impress on their children that cheating in school is equally as dishonest as in any other walk of life, teachers would be greatly aided and the pupils receive much benefit thereby.

He Got the Money.

The Atlanta Constitution tells a good story on the native southern judiciary. A man and woman called on a rural justice of the peace and asked for a divorce. The justice called the bailiff and asked in a whisper: "What's the law on that point?"

"You can't do it," replied the bailiff. "It don't come under yer jurisdiction."

"We're willin' ter pay cash for it," replied the husband, not understanding the nature of the consultation; "I've got the money in this here stockin'."

The justice looked grave. Then, adjusting his spectacles and addressing the man, he said:

"You knowed 'fore you came here that 'twarn't for me to separate husband an' wife, an' yet you not only take up the time of this here valuable court with yer talkin', but dekechully perpose to bribe me with money! Now, how much you got in that stockin'?"

"Bout six dollars an' a half, yer Honor."

"All right, then, I fine you five dollars for bribery an' a dollar an' a half for takin' up my time with a case what my jurisdiction is out of, an' may the Lord have mercy on your soul!"

GOVERNING IRISHMEN

Notable Doings of Celts in Affairs of Nations.

Of All Countries the United States is That in Which the Irish Are the Most Prominent in Public Life.

"Irishmen are on their trail." This is a phrase which has been constantly on the lips of English people of late. The opinion has been called forth by the inauguration of local government in Ireland, and the new system has been described as "an experiment," "a leap in the dark," of which none can foretell the consequences.

Let us take a few typical examples of the governing Irishmen. Let us glance at the careers of some compatriots who in modern times have proved the continuity of the national character, the character first exemplified in the ancient Brehon laws, one of the wisest, justest and most elaborate code of laws drawn up in any age or country, the character which again asserted itself in 1782, the era of Irish legislative independence, when, in the words of Grattan, "public prosperity so crowded on the heel of the statute that the powers of nature seemed to stand at the right hand of parliament."

Spain, France and Austria are the three countries in which Irishmen have chiefly attained renown, both as soldiers and statesmen, but their footprints may also be traced in the camps and senates of Russia and Holland, Bavaria, Portugal and Poland.

From the flight of the earls down to the present day the names of Irishmen have been entwined with the fortunes of Spain, O'Donell, dictator at Madrid; O'Reilly, ambassador from Spain to the court of Louis XIV.; Patrick Lawless ambassador from Portugal to the same court; O'Sullivan, grandee of Spain; O'Reilly, Kavanaugh and Nugent, Austrian marshals; Lacy and Browne, Russian marshals, and these are a few of the names which spring to one's mind.

The O'Donells of Spain, the Taafes of Austria and the MacMahons of France are perhaps the foremost. O'Donell duke of Tetuan, is one of the most influential grandees of Spain, a position which he and his ancestors have gained in recognition of valuable services rendered to the state. The career of the Irish-Austrian Taafes is no less illustrious. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries their names have been blazoned on the roll of imperia. Austria. Nicholas Taafe, field marshal who in 1738 won the famous victory of Belgrade over the Turks, and whose son succeeded him in turn to the post of chamberlain to the emperor, is a picturesque figure, but as an example of administrative genius the late prime minister, Count Francis Taafe, is the most notable. He is recognized as one of the ablest of Austria's statesmen, and it is a significant fact that his policy always trended in the direction of extending powers of self-government to the various nationalities comprising the empire. He was a federalist. In 1870 the year in which Isaac Butt started his home rule movement, Count Taafe recommended the Austrian emperor, as a member of his ministry, to grant autonomy to Bohemia.

The natural ability of the Irishman for ruling was strikingly recognized at the time of the American war of independence, when the French acted as allies of the new republic. The officers of the Irish brigade, under La Fayette whose regiments engaged in the campaign, were appointed governors of the West Indian islands, which they had previously conquered. O'Donn became governor of Grenada, Dillon of St. Christopher and Fitzmaurice of St. Eustache. The administration of these governors was equally praised by the English, French and American governments.

Of all countries the United States is that in which the Irish are the most prominent in public life. For the purpose of our argument it, perhaps, affords a better illustration than do the countries above referred to; for on the continent of Europe the Irishmen who have distinguished themselves belong for the most part to the aristocracy, but in the republic of the west it is the masses, not the classes, who administer public affairs, and the rank and file have acquitted themselves of the responsibility as creditably as have the nobility of their country elsewhere.

From the time when Dillon, of the Irish brigade, eagerly demanded leave of Louis XVI. to embark his regiment to join the American forces to the present day, when President McKinley, the grandnephew of the Ulster '98 man, sits in the white house, Irishmen have been foremost in the civil and military affairs of the great republic.

The proportion of Irishmen occupying the post of governor of British colonies and dependencies, or engaged in other administrative and legislative work throughout the empire, is greatly in excess of their numbers and influence as citizens of the same empire. By sheer force of merit and talent they have forced their way to the front. The figures of the colonial governors and premiers are perhaps more prosaic than those of the continental statesmen. Carving out the careers of new countries in the backwoods of Canada or the bush of Australia may not be such dazzling work as presiding over the destinies of the old world powers, but the task may prove a more solid and enduring one when the history of the future comes to be written.

The governing Irishman is as active

In Australia at present as in the early days of the colony, Hyrnes, O'Loughlin and O'Shaughnessy being some of the leading names.

This glance at the careers of a few governing Irishmen may serve to remind some onlookers of the high traditions of the race. That Irishmen will set up to their traditions in the future there is no reason to doubt.—Dublin Daily Independent.

PRICES TO CATCH THE EYE.

The Italian Fruit Seller Shows Much Shrewdness in Marking His Stock.

The Italian fruit seller shows his shrewdness as a business man in a small way by the prices which he puts on his wares. The fruit is arranged in tempting groups on his push cart, and each group is usually marked with a ticket, so that the pedestrian may know the prices without asking. Over a pile of plums may be seen the tiny sign: "Eight for nine cents." Now, says the New York Tribune, the average customer does not buy eight plums, and when he asks for one it is two cents, or two for three cents, and, as the vender sells more lots of one than anything else, the eight for nine cents becomes a myth, and his stock averages nearly two cents apiece. Peaches that are marked 12 for 25 cents if sold in dozen lots would be fairly cheap, but one peach from the same pile always costs three cents, and as "two for five" is the popular sale in that class the lot which is advertised at 25 cents usually brings more than 25 cents. In the orange season "eight for 25 cents" is a favorite price placed on the fruit, which is really sold for four cents apiece.

A bronzed Italian who has a regular route over which he sells fruit at all times of the year was asked: "Why don't you make prices for one or two, and not for eight and a dozen?"

"Eight for nine make ye look—den ye paye two fo' one," and he winked the other eye in a way that showed that his reputation for shrewdness was well deserved.

English Deceptions.

Everybody knows that suicide is unknown in England. It exists without existing, as it were, says Bardeux La France. When on the other side of the channel a person is found asphyxiated by charcoal fumes, or lying in a pool of blood with his arteries opened, or strung up to the branch of a tree, an inquiry is held, and it is solemnly laid down that the deceased succumbed to a fit of temporary insanity; for it would be immoral for an Englishman to commit suicide, and shocking to relate the fact.

A Mother's Plain Words

"I suppose you will be astonished when I tell you that six years ago I was in a most dangerous condition with bronchitis and lung trouble, because you can see how well and strong I am now. The attack at that time caused terrible pain in my chest and lungs. I could hardly move, and to stoop caused intense suffering. Someone advised Acker's English Remedy, and I thought I would try it, although I confess that down in my heart I had little faith in it. The first bottle gave great relief, and the second bottle made me the healthy woman I am today. My husband's lungs are weak also, and he cured himself with the same grand old remedy. Our boy and girl have both been saved by it from death by croup. I know this is so, for when they were attacked in the night I had a bottle in the closet, and by acting quickly that fatal malady was easily overcome. We always give it to the children when they have a cough or cold, and we would not be without it for anything. My sister will tell you also, if you ask her, that it is a medicine that can always be depended upon for all the troubles of the breathing organs. I tell all our neighbors about Acker's English Remedy whenever I get a chance, and there are plenty of people around Mechanicsville, N. Y., where I live, who would no more think of going to bed at night without a bottle of it in the house than they would of leaving their doors wide open. As I look at it, parents are criminally responsible when they allow their children to die under their very eyes with croup, because here is a certain remedy that will conquer the terrible monster every time."

(Signed) Mrs. FLOYD FOWLER.

Acker's English Remedy is sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee that your money will be refunded in case of failure. 25c, 50c, and $1 a bottle in United States and Canada. In England, 2s. 6d., 5s. 6d., and 10s. 6d.
