Will The Dalles make any special effort to entertain the university glee club upon their visit on the 28th. Some of our young people should take the matter in hand.

This morning John H. Matthews, of the East End, filed a petition with the county clerk asking that Carl Cutting, an incorrigible youth, be committed to the state reform school.

A telegram received at Vancouver from Senator Foster, insures the parents of Sergeant Damptoff, who was to be shot for assaulting Filipino women, that his sentence would be mitigated.

A report was current this morning that a man had been killed on the road this side of Arlington; but all endeavors to find anything definite concerning it have proven futile, so we conclude it was but a rumor.

The two little steamers, Elmore and Pearl, came up the river yesterday bringing with them Donovan's snow, which it was feared might be ice bound should severe weather overtake it. They returned this morning.

Portland theater-goers are looking forward to hearing Miss Blair, a talented actress, in Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Lady of Quality" next week. The play may be all right; but if it is, in our opinion it must differ widely from the book.

Wong Quong, the first National Bank robber, who is now being tried at Walla Walla for grand larceny, having stolen a $200 diamond, is defended by Atty. W. T. Dovell. Wasco county may yet feel like taking a hand in prosecuting the Celestial; that is, if Walla Walla fails in sending him up.

Four inches of snow fell last night, but was almost gone by afternoon. The temperature may reach the zero mark by morning, as predicted, but it doesn't bid fair to at present, while the thermometer is now at 37, and has been no lower than the freezing mark today. We believe Pague is rather going back on his prediction, for today's report says nothing about zero and simply predicts snow.

The city (streets excepted) presented a beautiful appearance this morning, with the housetops and trees covered with snow and the telephone wires a succession of white lines, bending under its weight. If kodak fiends were out early enough they must have obtained a number of splendid views. But grandest of all were the mountains south of the city, the whole effect being just such as is found in paintings of winter scenes.

Seeing the neighboring trees all about them falling under the woodman's ax, two of the large trees in front of O. J. Davis' house, on Third street, evidently decided that they would commit suicide rather than be cut down by man's hand. They therefore toppled over with a crash this afternoon, and completely blocked the sidewalk for a time. They have been somewhat like the last leaf for a long time, bent over with age; but nevertheless their shade will be greatly missed.

Although the attendance at the Lutheran bazaar on neither evening was large, yet two of the best of musical programs were rendered and all who heard them were greatly pleased. The ladies worked hard and were deserving of a much larger crowd; but inclement weather and duties preparatory to Christmas must have prevented many attending. Financially, however, they might be said to have been successful, at least in a measure; for those who attended were such as contribute largely to such affairs, and make all concerned feel that their labors were not in vain.

Heavy snow has fallen during the past week and it is sincerely hoped that it has come to stay; and the large quantities of goods which were stored here waiting for the roads to improve, may be hauled to the various surrounding mining camps. The weather has been mild and pleasant, however, snow on the roofs of houses melting during the warmer hours of the day and freezing into thousand of icicles on the eaves as the temperature lowered. Building operations have not been interfered with, except the annoyance of digging out lumber from great snow banks.—Sumpter Miner.

The "rocky road to Dublin" isn't in it with the muddy chuck hole roads throughout the interior. We cannot vouch for the truth of the statement that one stage turned over four times before reaching its destination, but such is the report. This terrible condition is said to be due in a great measure to the fact that many freight teams mire almost to the hubs, which necessitates digging them out. Instead of again filling in the immense holes thus made, the teamster proceeds on his way, leaving a pitfall into which the unsuspecting driver who follows in the wake finds his wheels plunged. It produces anything but a pleasant sensation.

Gifford's Mt. Hood pictures make a hit wherever they go, and the greatest difficulty now is whether it will be possible to supply the Christmas demand, as so many are sending them to friends in the East. When Harry Lonsdale left for his home in Columbia, Mo., he carried, along with a number of other views of Oregon scenery, a large Mt. Hood picture. He had been home but a day or two, when he sent an order to M. Z. Donnell for two of the same views for friends there who had been captivated with it. Thus not only the pictures are becoming famous, but Oregon as well through the splendid advertisement thus given.

A TRIBUTE TO CAPT. WAUD.

The Most Eminent and Highest Salaried Pilot on the Yukon.

Almost three weeks have passed and yet no word has been received concerning the particulars of Capt. Waud's death. The Columbian, a paper published at New Westminster, B. C., was received by Mrs. Waud this morning, which contains the following tribute to the dead captain:

"Word was received here yesterday afternoon, of the death of a prominent Yukon pilot, in the person of Captain O. S. Waud, who passed away at Dawson, on November 16.

"The sad intelligence was conveyed to Mrs. Johns, of this city, a sister of the deceased, but the brief telegraphic message gave no particulars as to the cause of death.

"The deceased captain was pilot, last season, on the steamer Ora, of which M. J. J. Campbell, of this city, was master, and which plied between Dawson and the White Horse Rapids. He was universally liked and respected, not only by the traveling public, but by his employers and those associated with him in the navigation of the great river of the far north, and it was generally conceded that he was the most expert swift water pilot on the coast, a fact which enabled him to draw the largest salary yet paid in that region for this service.

"Only the second last trip of the Ora, the officers and crew presented Captain Waud with the best gold watch which money could buy in the Klondike capital, and the news of his death will be deeply regretted wherever he was known.

"The deceased leaves a widow and family, the oldest of whom, a lad of 17 years, spent last season with him, and who, it is understood, are comfortably provided for in their home at The Dalles, Oregon."

Etiquette of Introductions.

The Culture Club at Cauthorn hall last Friday evening discussed topics under "The Etiquette of Introductions." Culture is a twin to education, and he who would win position by the latter must grace it with the former. Familiarity with the following simple rules of etiquette discussed by the club may never come amiss:

Inferiors are introduced to superiors; gentleman to the lady; younger to the older. The question of rank does not hold good in American society.

Never bow hastily. The lady bows first.

An American takes his hat off to a lady; a foreigner raises it but slightly. Introductions should not be indiscriminately done.

No gentleman should be introduced to a lady without her permission.

At a dinner party the hostess introduces to the lady the gentleman who is to take her to the dining room, but rarely makes further introduction.

Great pains should be taken by a hostess to introduce shy people.

It is well in presenting two strangers to say something that may break the ice and make the conversation easy; as "Mrs. Brown, allow me to present Mr. Starr, who has just arrived from Manila."

Always respond to the greeting in the key-note of the giver.

One of the duties of the host and hostess of a private party is to make the guests acquainted with each other.

Pronounce distinctly the names of those introduced.

Ease and self-possession are essential to happy introductions.

Introductions are often dispensed with at a private ball.

If introduced to an objectionable person at your friend's home, give no sign of ill feeling while you are the guest of your friend.

As a rule the introduction calls for a slight recognition thereafter.

A gentleman will not let the lack of an introduction prevent him rendering services to any unattended lady who may need them. He will politely offer his protection, escort or assistance, and when the service has been accomplished, politely bow and retire.—Union-Gazette.

WARE THAT WEARS.

All silver-plated ware looks alike—when it is new.

I am selling high grade Forks and Spoons that will look well in five years from now—for the silver on them goes deeper than the shine. And the price is not so very much more than you would pay for trash.
